JOB-SHARING PLAN TO BE LEFT UP TO EACH EMPLOYER

W. C. Teagle, Head of Hoover's Committee, Says
He Hopes to Make Movement Nation-Wide.

FIRST OF BUSINESS GROUPS TO MEET

Leader Asserts "We Do
Honestly Believe That We Can Make a Dent in Unemployment."

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The first of the new national business committees got to work today in response to President Hoover's economic conference.

The committee charged with promoting the campaign for sharing of work, headed by Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Co.
of New Jersey, took up the unemployment problem at a lengthy conference to which Secretary of Labor Doak and other officers were invited.

Teagle said: "We do earnestly believe that we can start making a dent in unemployment. The proposal must be in the hands of each employer and employee. How it is done is up to them. Of course, we don't want the standard of present
workers cut below the cost of living.
It is a job for the individuals and the district committees."

"Job Security by Spreading."

Asked about the five-day week plan, Teagle replied: "We don't think it is the answer to the question of sharing work. We hope to make it a national movement. The slogan on the West coast where this movement was started is 'Job security by job sharing' and that sounds pretty good."

Meanwhile, a note of confidence spread over the capital that the exhortation given the men who control the nation's credit at yesterday's conference by President Hoover and other leaders would cause a fresh and determined move for improved conditions.

A. W. Robertson, chairman of the special committee for expansion of capital expenditures by industry through replacements of obsolete equipment, left for Pittsburgh, where he will outline a plan

HOME LOAN BANK SITES CHOSEN: ONE FOR LITTLE ROCK

Board Selects Cities in States Whose Institutions Legally Are Authorized to Purchase Stock.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The Federal Home Loan Bank board tonight announced its 12 banks
would be located at Cambridge, Mass.; Newark, N. J.; Pittsburgh,
Pa.; Winston-Salem, N. C.; Cincinnati,
O.; Indianapolis, Ind.; Topeka, Kan., Little Rock, Ark.; Topeka, Kan.; Portland, Ore., and Los Angeles, Cal.

The board also said that with the sites chosen, its next activity would be to make arrangements for opening subscription books for stock.
This it plans to do in the immediate future.

May Go to Capital.

He said he would telephone to Washington, to learn whether a person's application was necessary,
and that he would leave for Washington Monday night or later, if it is found necessary for him to go.
Prof. Walter E. Bagehot of the University of Missouri will accompany him.

Acting Mayor Neun, who directed the presentation of facts on which the Governor's decision was based, said:

"I am glad the Governor has decided to ask for a substantial sum, which is pretty now. I much hoped that he would ask for the full $1,037,000 which was indicated by our detailed estimate, as these estimates had been made with care and with no exaggeration. But if it is preferred to make the request in installments, we can make a like showing of facts later."

The calculation of city officials was that the $1,037,000 would be needed, together with all that can be raised by special taxation and private contributions, to meet the needs of unemployment relief here until Jan. 1.

Data furnished the Governor by the city officials, which will be included in his application to Washington, shows the extent of the need here, number of families requiring help, and the amount to be available from city appropriations and crisis campaign subscriptions.

Advance Not a Loan.

The Federal relief act providing a fund of $300,000,000 for advances to states and municipalities for unemployment relief provides for repayment by deductions from appropriations of Federal funds to the states for road construction.

Gov. Caulfield got an opinion from the Attorney-General's office that advances to the states from this fund are not loans, and need not be repaid. The Governor, the opinion stated, would not incur responsibility for the money, except to see that it was disbursed for relief.

City Counselor Muench, in a letter to the Governor, expressed a similar view, saying that the advances might prove to be an "out-
and-out donation."

Muench expressed the view that St. Louis and other large cities, which furnish most of the income tax revenue
are entitled to receive some help from the Federal treasury in the present emergency.

Kansas City Asks Governor for Ad-

nicipality would not be responsible for repayment of the money which might be advanced under the resolution. The money, if made avail-

FARMERS EXTEND STRIKE IN IOWA TO DES MOINES

Blockades on Six Roads Leading into Capital With Plans to Picket All 29 by Monday.

CONFERENCE OF 15 GOVERNORS PLANNED

South Dakota Executive to Call Meeting to Outline Program for Campaign to Increase Prices.

By the Associated Press. DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 27.—Picket lines of the farmers' holiday movement slowly tightened about this capital city today as the center of activity in the fight for higher farm prices shifted for the third time in two weeks.

Meanwhile, Gov. Warren E. Green of South Dakota at Huron announced he would call a conference of 15 governors of agricultural states to meet at Sioux City, Ia., to promote an "orderly, practical, legal and non-violent" program for increasing farm prices.

Peaceful blockades were established at Des Moines on six main highways and the pickets carried on a "persuasion campaign" to induce truckers carrying farm products to return home. Those who refused were warned that "this is the last time" they would be permitted to pass.

Plans were laid for extension of the picket lines to include all 29 highways leading into the city. Leaders said they expected to have camps established on every one of the roads by Monday morning.

"Khaki Shirts" Join in Fight.

Co-operating with the farm pickets was a group of members of the Khaki Shirts of America, a recently organized body led by Lyman Cook, Burlington attorney and a member of the staff of W. W. Waters with the Washington bonus army. Cook claims that the organization is not an offshoot of the bonus army and labeled it a "political organization" seeking better government.

Begun with a handful of men who appeared on one highway early today, the force of pickets was increased to 200 by 10 a. m., and doubled that figure in the late afternoon. Despite a chill drizzling rain lasting through midafternoon, most of the pickets held their positions.

Sheriff Charles F. Keeling toured the camps with a group of deputies and made no move to stop the assemblies. He indicated he would take no action as long as no violence occurred.

Some decline in milk receipts was noted during the afternoon by distributors. For directors of the Des Moines Co-operative Milk Marketing Association went into conference with holiday leaders preliminary to a conference on milk prices. Producers consigned to the league of the unemployed were permitted to pass through the blockades un molested.

Milk was the principal item of produce on the highways today as the week-end supplies of other farm goods had been delivered to Des Moines merchants earlier in the day.

Other Points Quiet.

Picketing activities at other points remained fairly quiet. A hundred men blockaded the four highways leading into Council Bluffs, previous center of the movement.

County Attorney Bert Dickeson of Council Bluffs announced the grand jury next Tuesday would investigate the picketing and indicated indictments would be sought on charges of robbery with aggravated and petty and grand larceny against pickets who had stopped trucks and confiscated the produce.

The blockade remained officially in effect at Council Bluffs but John Chalmers, president of the Iowa Holiday Association, said it would be lifted as to milk shipments as soon as Omaha distributor would make an arrangement for higher prices. Distributors issued an ultimatum that no negotiations would be conducted unless the blockade was raised completely.

A meeting this afternoon of milk producers and distributors with Mayor Richard L. Metcalf took no definite action. The conference agreed to meet with the Mayor again tomorrow.

Motorists Report Search.

Sheriff P. A. Lathen, central figure in the threatened riot at Council Bluffs Thursday when 1000 farmers forced release of 55 arrested pickets by threatening to storm the courthouse, said motorists were exhibiting resentment toward the pickets. He said all cars stopped and searched at the Pottawattamie blockades and that he had received protests from about 50 persons, some of them women who accused the pickets of using abusive language.

The tension at Sioux City, scene of the original picketing activity, quieted further as milk trucks were allowed to pass blockades un molested following settlement last night of a price dispute between dairymen and milk distributors.

The holiday movement spread to Fort Dodge, where holiday adhes-

TELLS HOW MACHINES HAVE TAKEN MEN'S JOBS SINCE 1929

Research Head Says With Industry at Peak Only 55 of Idle Could Return.

SPECIAL TO THE POST-DISPATCH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Machines have displaced men so rapidly that if industry went back to its peak operations of 1929 only 55 per cent of the workers thrown out by the depression could be re-employed, according to Howard Scott, head of the research organization, "Technocracy," an institution founded by Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard.

Scott declared that no revival of old industries or invention of new ones could possibly check the rising tide of unemployment. He stated that the present depression, measured by variations from normal, was four times as severe as any that had preceded it.

An industrial worker today, according to Scott, yields 9,000,000 times the energy that a worker did 100 years ago. Most of this change, he said, had come about in the last 25 years.

HOOVER EXPECTED TO MAKE NEW YORK CAMPAIGN SPEECH

Democrats Announce That Mrs. Norton, Former Smith Supporter, Will Speak for Ticket.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Democratic national headquarters made known tonight that Mrs. Mary T. Norton, United States Representative from New Jersey and one of the Smith supporters at the convention, will speak for the Roosevelt ticket.

But the pageant, depicting a mythical orient and an happy alchemy of imagination, took the bizarre "Thief of Bagdad" entered into a moving mass of color, reaching a climax with the 5500 children moving about with dazzling effect.

The "dragon," motivated by 30 children of the Laclede playground and fully 40 feet long, was exceeded in size only by a turbaned and stilted genie towering 14 feet to make bright midgets of the gayly costumed children.

Battle of Persian Warriors.

There was even a fierce, if bloodless, conflict between red and white Persian warriors, 800 of them, divided equally. By chance, the red swordsmen were from North St. Louis and the white from South St. Louis, so that some sanguinary strife was delayed during rehearsal and the battle of the pageant was carried out with restraining vines.

Blending with the dreamy music, which now and again rose to smashing crescendos, girls moved in graceful dances, some of them in waist-tilt. There was even a torch dance. When 1200 tambourine girls in many-hued costumes darted upon the field it resembled a kaleidoscope, the noise of the tambourines sounding in the stand like the clink of thousands of tiny bits of glass.

An Oriental Bazaar.

An oriental bazaar, with jugglers, tumblers, all of the mysterious faculty of the Far East was included in a series of vivid spectacles, perfectly synchronized, which ranged from sprites to moon, stars and crystals of the morning dew.

Appropriately, the pageant was concluded with the glamourous Dance of Happiness, to the tune of "Irene," from the operette of that name. All was arranged and directed by Rodow H. Abeken, perchched high by a microphone above the crowded stadium. His aids spent months in preparing what was characterized by school officials the most successful and elaborate school production ever presented northward.

New York Legion Votes for Bonus Payment at Once.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—An appeal by F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War, that many of the discharge papers carried by members of the Washington bonus campaign had been forged by "concerns," "diploma mills," temporarily disturbed the State convention of the American Legion today.

With boos, hisses, cheers and applause, the delegates made so much noise that Davison was unable to continue for several minutes.

Selling campaign in this State included:

Wheat 30 cents a bushel, corn 54 cents, barley 48 cents, oats 32 cents, flax $1.50, wool 32 cents a pound, heavy hens 18 cents a pound, eggs 25 cents per dozen, and milk 22 per hundredweight. Livestock prices would be based on the "cost of production" plus a fair profit.

South Dakota will join the holiday movement, only if the other agricultural states agreed to the date. Sept. 1, they have set as the start of their campaign. The committee which worked out the price schedule described it as conservative. The list will be offered at the Sioux City, Ia., governors' conference, if that materializes, for ratification.

automobiles, buses and 55 special trains and started home.

With the Governor were his wife and two of his sons, Franklin Jr. and John. With Gov. Moore and Mrs. Moore and Farley, they had lunch at the Little White House.

Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey introduced the New York Governor to the crowd. In doing so, he called Gov. Roosevelt "one of the plain people."

Attack Hoover Statement.

In a direct attack on President Hoover and his acceptance speech, Gov. Roosevelt said:

"To anyone who will read the prohibition plank in the Republican platform and the remarks of the President on this question in his acceptance speech, the difficulty under which the President labors will become obvious, and the reason for his use of meaningless words is in his difficulty always attending to the plain words."

He gave the following interpretation of the Republican prohibition plank:

"We first have a long, rambling party pronouncement in the Republican platform. And then we have long rambling explanations of its meaning.

"Words upon words. Evasions. Insincerity upon insincerity. A dense cloud of words.

"We rush into the cloud to find whether there is meaning and substance at the bottom of it all, and we find nothing.

"When we emerge from the cloud, we see another in the distance and we rush over to that. And again we find nothing.

"And so we rush from cloud to cloud and find at the bottom of each nothing but dust, meaningless, worthless dust, at the bottom of a cloud of words."

"I suspect that those who wrote that plank thought it would sound dry to the drys and wet to the wet," he continued.

"But to the consternation of the high priests, it sounded dry to the wet and wet to the dry."

Verdict of Public Opinion.

In contending that public opinion had approved the Democratic plank, Gov. Roosevelt declared:

"It (the public opinion) liked people who spoke their minds. It liked courage and candor. This must have been disturbing to the high priests of the Republican party, but, as always, they hesitated and temporized."

In the acceptance speech, Gov.

Roosevelt continued, President Hoover "proceeds deliberately to misrepresent the position of the Democratic party on prohibition."

He said, an attempt was made to retain a prohibition plank.

"Does that spell out a prohibitionist attempting to retain the support of the drys?" Gov. Roosevelt demanded.

RELATIVES SEEK $86,000 LEFT TO DOGS AND CATS

Dissolution of Trust Fund
Established by Henry C. Babcock, Oil Broker, Urged in Suit.

PETITION CALLS HIM MONOMANIA

Brother of Decedent and 11
Others Bring Action to Obtain Share in Estate
Given Dumb Animals.

Dissolution of an $86,000 trust fund established for the care of dogs and cats by the late Henry C. Babcock, 86-year-old retired oil broker, is sought in a suit filed yesterday in Circuit Court by his brother, William H. Babcock, and 11 other relatives.

Babcock, who is 90 years old and lives at his brother's former home at 7022 Delmar boulevard, University City, is administrator of the estate.

One of the main contentions in the petition, directed against the Merchants-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., which was given discretionary powers in the administration of the trust agreement, is that the oil broker was a "monomaniac" and "obsessed" on the subject of cats and dogs.

Objectives of the fund, which was established originally by Mr. and Mrs. Babcock, are set forth with such indefiniteness and uncertainty, the petition states, as to nullify the trust agreement. Mrs. Babcock died several years ago and her husband died last June. The petition alleged that Babcock was "mentally incapable" of executing the agreement.

Petitioners in the suit, who would be entitled to share in the estate

How Flying Laboratory Will Study the Eclipse

Two Cameras and Device to Measure Cosmic Rays to Go Into Action at 27,000-Foot Altitude.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 27.—A flying laboratory, for photographing the total eclipse of the sun on Aug. 21, at an altitude of 27,000 feet, and for measuring the effect of the eclipse on cosmic rays, took off from Wright Field today for Boston Airport, the operations base for the expedition.

Commanded by Capt. A. W. Stevens, United States Army photographer, the plane will be aloft at Boston Wednesday. Lieut. C. J. McAllister of the flight section of Wright Field will pilot the special plane which Stevens has used in several scientific experiments.

Two types of cameras will be used by Stevens, a long focus and a short focus. The long focus will be used in picturing the corona of the sun and the short one for taking the shadow on the earth.

In addition, an apparatus for measuring the intensity of cosmic rays during the eclipse, to determine whether the rays decrease in the shadow of the moon, will be carried.

During the last two weeks, Stevens has been conducting tests of the apparatus to measure cosmic rays, an invention of Dr. Lewis Melt-Smith of Rice Institute, Texas.

"More than 50 sets of readings have been secured at elevations of from 5000 to 25,000 feet," Stevens said. "Thus has been determined on the absence of a will if the fund were dissolved, comprising, besides the administrators, Edgars R. Louise and Albert T. Babcock, Jessie R. Ralston, F. J. Westervelt, Edwin A. Baker, Charlotte Tabor Jeffers, Ruth E. Felgate, and Charles W. Frank E. and Henry C. Tabor.

The trust agreement stipulates that no relatives of either Mr. and Mrs. Babcock have any further claim on them. It explains that this circumstance was considered in founding the fund which was established "because of the love that the donor and his wife have always had for dumb animals."

The purpose was announced as "the care and elimination of suffering among dogs and cats." The fund was designated as "The Babcock Relief Fund for Dumb Animals" and the trustee empowered either to administer it directly or turn it over to an organization deemed worthy of fulfilling its objectives. The wish of the donors was expressed that the trustee consider that others might be inspired to establish similar foundations.

$75,400 of Bonds.

The fund consists of bonds estimated by William H. Babcock to have a present market value of about $75,400 and the University City property which has an assessed valuation of $10,800. The suit to set aside the agreement was filed by the law firm of Taylor, Mayer & Shifrin.

In describing the agreement at the time it was published in the Post-Dispatch the administrator of the estate narrated examples of his brother's fondness for dogs. One of the dogs, "Jack," still stands watch at the residence.

Babcock recalled that about 15 years ago his brother and sister-in-law were motorizing in Florida when a stray dog they had picked up fell ill.

FIVE HELD AFTER STOLEN JEWELS ARE RECOVERED

Go-Between Seized in Drug Store After Offer to Re-sell $6780 Gems to Dr.
Bert Babee.

A telephone call to Dr. Bert P. Babee, last Thursday, with an offer to sell him $6780 of jewelry stolen three weeks ago in a holdup at his apartment, 501 Purdue avenue, University City, led to recovery of the jewelry and the arrest of five men.

On being questioned further, McGarry said he had received the package from William S. Lehman, an address on Kingsbury avenue. The insurance company, he said, announced its loss at $400, whereas the robbers actually got $66. Over a doorway at his home police found the pistol which he said was used in the Babee robbery.

Lehman also told police he and his two robber companions held up a drug store on Kingsbury avenue last June and later robbed an insurance company office in Memphis. The insurance company, he said, announced its loss at $400, whereas the robbers actually got $66. Over a doorway at his home police found the pistol which he said was used in the Babee robbery.

Lehman and the others were arrested. The others are Emil Tuilik, alias Costello, reading on Page boulevard, and Rastus Vandeford, residing on Newberry terrace.

Lehman is 25 years old, Tuilik 24, and Vandeford 29.

Three of the prisoners were robbers. The other two are a professional bandleader, who received the jewelry from the robbers and a musician who said he was merely acting as an agent for the bandleader.

Lehman said the jewelry was given to him "in the interest to be disposed of and part of the money used to pay for the bonds." McGarry denied such was the case.

Four in Apartment Tied Up.

Tuilik and Vandeford, according to Tuilik, were the pair who held up Dr. Babee in the doorway at his home at 11 a. m. Aug. 2, and marched him and the janitor, whom they had bound with ropes, upstairs to the Babee apartment.

City detectives were watching the telephone at 5:30 p. m. Thursday when Dr. Babee phoned there. The man who answered was arrested. He was the musician and gave information which led to the arrest of Edward McGarry, contractor and professional bondsman, 1510 Angelrood street.

Loot Recovered in Store.

McGarry told police he had left the jewelry in a package at a drug store at Ewing avenue and Market street after taking it out of a safe deposit box at a bank.

The officers recovered the jewels which contained bracelets, rings, and necklaces and the moneybox case stolen from the physician. Dr. Babee, who identified the property, said it was intact.

TEXT OF GOV. ROOSEVELT'S CAMPAIGN ADDRESS ON PROHIBITION AT SEA GIRT, N. J.

DENOUNCES G. O. P. TICKET AS MOIST AT ONE END AND DRY AT THE OTHER

Charges Hoover With Sacrificing Principles for Votes and Trying to Conceal Fact With "Pussycat Words."

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 27.—The text of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's speech here today follows:

I am confident that it will go on as the voters in both states sustain, as they do now, the sound democratic principle that state affairs are best administered by the states themselves. We in New Jersey and New York are not afraid to trust the states even though the administration in Washington, as I shall show today, seems to doubt that the states can be trusted to administer their own affairs.

Once upon a time an orator who was describing the scenery of his state remarked that in the North it was "mountainous" and that in the south it was "moisterous."

The classic description reminds me of the Republican national ticket this year—moist and dry at one end and at the other end increasing moisture.

But before I come to further elucidation on that point let me make another clear.

However we may differ as to method, we all agree, that temperance is one of the cardinal virtues. In dealing with the great social problems in my own state, such as the care of the wards of the State, and in combatting crime, I have had to consider most earnestly this question of temperance. It is bound up with crime, with insanity and, only too often, with poverty. It is increasingly apparent that the intemperate use of intoxicants has no place in the new, mechanized civilization of ours. In our industry, in our recreation, on our highways, a drunkard man is more than an obnoxious

Highlights of Roosevelt's Speech

By the Associated Press.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 27.—IGHLIGHTS of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign address here today follows:

The Republican national ticket this year—"High and Dry" at one end and at the other end increasing moisture.

The proper means of regulation is through the states, with control by the Federal Government limited to that which is necessary to protect the states in the exercise of their legitimate powers.

Unquestionably our tax burden would not be so heavy nor the forms that it takes so objectionable if some reasonable proportion of the uncounted millions now paid to those whose business has been reared upon this stupendous blunder could be made available for the expenses of government.

When they would use words as a defense they must use more of them. Witness the Republican platform—long, indirect, ambiguous, insincere, false, compared with the concise sincerity of our own platform. And this is especially true of what they say about prohibition.

I suspect that those who wrote that (Republican prohibition) plank thought that it would sound dry to the drys and wet to the wets. But to the consternation of the high priests, it sounded dry to the wets and wet to the drys.

The difficulty under which the President labors . . . is the difficulty that always attends sacrificing principles for votes, and attempting to conceal that fact by the use of pussy-cat words.

In New York State in 1930 there was a party which tried to ride two horses at the same time . . . unfortunately the horses insisted upon going in different directions and the party fell to the ground between them. This year the Republican national leaders have tried the same circus stunt. The answer . . . will be the same.

But before I come to further elucidation on that point let me make another clear.

However we may differ as to method, we all agree, that temperance is one of the cardinal virtues. In dealing with the great social problems in my own state, such as the care of the wards of the State, and in combatting crime, I have had to consider most earnestly this question of temperance. It is bound up with crime, with insanity and, only too often, with poverty. It is increasingly apparent that the intemperate use of intoxicants has no place in the new, mechanized civilization of ours. In our industry, in our recreation, on our highways, a drunkard man is more than an obnoxious butthead.

Brands Prohibition

"A Tragic Failure."

But the methods adopted since the great war with the purpose of achieving a greater temperance by the forcing of prohibition have been accompanied in most parts of the country by complete and tragic failure. I need not point out to you that general encouragement of lawlessness has resulted; that corruption, hypocrisy, crime and disorder have emerged, and that instead of restricting, we have extended the spread of intemperance.

This failure has come for this very good reason: We have depended too largely upon the power of governmental action instead of reasoning, siding with the authority of the home, the authority of the school and particularly the authority of the churches in these matters, are the fundamental forces on which we must build.

The recent recognition of this fact by the present administration is an amazing piece of hindsight. There are others who have had foresight. A friend showed me recently an unpublished letter of Henry Clay, written 100 years ago. In this letter Clay said that the movement for temperance "has done great good and will continue to do more" but "it will destroy itself whenever it resorts to coercion or mixes in the politics of the country."

Another statesman, given to the nation by this State of New Jersey, pointed out this necessary course when Federal prohibition first became a great issue. President Wilson, in view of the economic and social results of an attempt to do this, did not necessary for him to have through the disastrous experience now confessed by our present President. In statesmanship, an ounce of foresight is better than a pound of hindsight.

The experience of nearly 150 years under the Constitution has shown us that the proper means of regulation is through the states, with control by the Federal Government limited to that which is necessary to protect the states in the exercise of their legitimate powers. This, I submit, is the principle embodied in our Democratic platform; and I state further that it is not the principle stated in the Republican platform or in the speeches of acceptance of the two candidates of the Republican party.

This time of depression has caused us to see, given more plainly than ever, not only the political and monetary consequences of our action, but its economic results as well. We three on the table as spoils to be grabbed for by the enemies of society, the revenue that our Government had therefore received, and the underworld, acquired unparalleled resources thereby. The multiplication of enforcement agencies created resentment and a cynical and complacent attitude toward law enforcement, resulting from connivance with such agencies and the law breakers.

Disrespect for Law Bred by Prohibition.

The general disregard for and defiance of such law of nation-wide application bred disrespect for other law. The attempt to impose the practice of a virtue by mandate of the fundamental law produced an attitude of intolerance to other forms of restraint and a denial even of the basis of authority.

The violation of fundamental principles set in motion a chain of consequences that no one not positively blind could fail to see; and all the time a steady flow of profits and substance at the bottom of it all, and we find nothing. When we emerge from the clouds, we rush into the sun. And again we find nothing—and so we rush from cloud to cloud and find at the bottom of each, nothing but dust, meaningless, worthless dust at the bottom of a cloud of words.

One of the stories that we learned in our youth was that of the famous Oracle of Delphi. In ancient Greece, it is told, there was a place where volcanic gas came forth from a crevasse in the earth. Over this crevasse the pagans built a temple and directly above the fumes arising from the earth, they set the throne of the oracle. When the oracle was partly stupefied by the poisons in the gas, she uttered strange and incoherent words. The high priests of the temple were summoned to tell the people the meaning of these incoherent words.

When they would use words as a defense they must use more of them. Witness the Republican platform—long, indirect, ambiguous, insincere, false, compared with the concise sincerity of our own platform. And this is especially true of what they say about prohibition.

I suspect that those who wrote that plank thought that it would sound dry to the drys and wet to the wets. But to the consternation of the high priests, it sounded dry to the wets and wet to the drys.

This was very serious indeed.

Something had to be done about it.

100 Pct. for Repeat

Plank of Democrats.

Well, something was done about it. The Democratic party, fairly and squarely, met the issue. It adopted, by an overwhelming vote, a plank as plain and clear and honest as any plank ever adopted by any party. The plank was not passed by the high priests, it was accepted by the people of the country.

It is the difficulty that always attends sacrificing principles for votes, and attempting to conceal that fact by the use of pussy-cat words.

Likens G. O. P. Planks

To Delphic Oracles.

In June, the Republican oracle sat in Chicago. There was a fume of heated oratory; clouds of prohibitory proposals were emitted; the Resolutions Committee and the convention itself succumbed to the stupefying influence. It uttered words in the party platform words and more words till the meaning was lost and ears numbed.

And then when the convention ended and the people asked the high priests of the party what it all meant, the answers were so diverse that one was tempted to suspect the worst—that it meant nothing at all. The Secretary of State explained in the choicest phrases of Republican diplomacy: Senator Borah spoke out in his forthright fashion and said it sounded wet to him; President Butler said the words were dry.

There were difficulties in the way, because the high priests had often spoken of their project before 1932. The Republican candidate for the presidency said, "I do not favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment"; and, applying his meaning at that time, he added that it was "a great social and economic experiment noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose."

Says Hoover Shifts

On Dry Enforcement.

He brought about the creation of the Commission on Law Enforcement and Obedience composed of "an able group of distinguished citizens of character and independence of thought, representative of different sections of the country."

I suspect that those who wrote that plank thought that it would sound dry to the drys and wet to the wets. But to the consternation of the high priests, it sounded dry to the wets and wet to the drys.

This was very serious indeed. Something had to be done about it.

At last, on Aug. 11, the President spoke to the people. To any one who will read the prohibition plank in the Republican platform and the remarks of the President on this question in his acceptance speech, the difficulty under which the President labors will become obvious and the meaning of his public thought.

It is difficult to say that always attends sacrificing principles for votes, and attempting to conceal that fact by the use of pussy-cat words.

The statement can be no better substantiated than by the President's own statement that "I have always sympathized with the high purpose of the eighteenth amendment."

Does that spell out a prohibitionist stamping to retain the support of the drys?

But the President has at last learned what the

Cut of Billion in Federal Budget Necessary to Recovery, Says Baruch

None of Palliatives Will Succeed Without It;
With It They Won't Be Needed,
He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—A billion dollar slash in the Federal budget was advocated today by Bernard M. Baruch as a prime essential to business recovery.

The New York financier and wartime head of the War Industries Board, in the leading article in the current number of the Nation's Business, said unless such a cut is made, "none of the palliatives thus far devised will succeed," and if it is done, "these palliatives should soon prove unnecessary."

It is understood that the strike was discussed at the Cabinet meeting today in London and both Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and J. H. Thomas, Dominions
Secretary, are going to Balmoral Castle in Scotland Monday to confer with King George. But the Ottawa economic conference, rather than Manchester, is expected to be the principal topic of their conversations.

Eric D. Batterton, Minister of Labor, has said that no good would be likely to come from intervention by the Government at this stage.

It is estimated that the strike,
if it is complete, will cost the nation about $1,500,000 (currently $5-190,000) a week in lost orders and unearned wages.

The walkout order may not be in some places—such as Leigh, Lillford and Rosehill—
where the operators are understood to have opposed the strike and to have expressed their intention of staying at work.

TEXT OF ROOSEVELT
PROHIBITION SPEECH
AT SEA GIRT, N. J.
Continued From Preceding Page.

these many years—that laws opposed by the majority sentiments create resentment which undermines enforcement and in the end produces degeneration and crime."

This seems to mean state home rule. But apparently the President does not really believe in State home rule, if by the use of force
there can be effective Federal control. He is willing to believe in the when the Federal Government cannot get away with the destruction of State control.

His statement proceeds deliberately to misrepresent the position of the Democratic party. He says:

"Our opponents pledge the members of their party to destroy every vestige of constitutional and effective Federal control of the traffic."

I have the right to assume that the President read the Democratic platform and on that assumption I charge that this statement was made to mislead the people of this country and I assert that a mere reading of the plain, unequivocal provisions of the Democratic platform will sustain that charge. So that there can be no possible misunderstanding, let me read the provisions of the Democratic platform on this point. It begins: "We advocate the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. To effect such a repeal we demand that the Congress immediately propose a constitutional amendment to truly representative conventions in the states called to act solely on that proposal."

So much for repeal. Now what does it tell the states to do: "We urge the enactment of laws which will... in several states will actually promote temperance, effectively prevent the return of the sausage and bring the liquor traffic into the open under complete supervision and control by the states."

Protecting States

In Their Prerogatives.

Then clearly states what the President either accidentally overlooked or deliberately misrepresented: "We demand that the Federal Government effectively exercise its power to enable the states to protect themselves against importation of intoxicating liquors in violation of their laws."

It then goes on: "To speak of the Volstead act: Pending repeal, we favor immediate modification of the manufacture and sale of alcohol and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the Constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue."

Thus the Democratic platform
expressly and unequivocally opposes the return of the saloon and equally emphasizes it demands that there be Federal control of the liquor traffic to protect the states. Only on the theory of seeking to return to power by the mere use of words can such statements of the President of these United States be explained.

Cites Unequivocal Dry
Stand of Vice President.

But meanwhile, another high priest has been heard from. In the period following Aug. 11, the antirepeaters in the Republican party

raised their voices in lamentation, like Jeremiah of old.

The Republican candidate for Vice-President heard this wailing.

He hastened to avow his devotion to the Republican platform but he was found in the words of the oracle full justification for the relief that the eighteenth amendment should not be repealed. And so, in the true spirit of those who in ancient times controlled the oracle for their own ends, provided for possible contingencies.

Derides "Circus Stunt"

That Failed Once Before.

In New York State in 1920 there was a party which tried to ride two horses at the same time. The Republican party had one foot—it's candidate for Governor—on the wet horse, and the other foot—it's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor—
on the dry horse. Unfortunately, the horses insisted upon going in different directions, and the party
told to the ground between them.

This year the Republican national leaders have tried the same circus stunt. The answer of the voters throughout the nation will be precisely the same.

In the last analysis, my friends,
the prohibition issue comes down to a question of faith and confidence in leadership and in the words of leaders.

Now the people may differ as to the principle of prohibition, national or state. We all agree that a temporizing and inactionary policy is disastrous not only to the cause of prohibition but to that of temperance as well. The present leadership stands convicted of attempting to evade and confuse this issue.

The honest dry will, I know, honor
the more honest wet than the shifty
dry; and the anti-prohibitionist prefers, I know, the four-square dry to the uncertain wet. All will join in condemning a fearful and timid practice of evasion.

Here as before I emphasize that the deep question in this campaign is one of confidence in leadership—in leaders. The measure of the truth of what they say is what they have said; the measure of what they will do is what they have done.

STRIKING MINERS PLAN TO SEEK COURTS' AID

Routed Illinois Workers Discuss Retaliatory Plans at Mass
Meetings.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 27.—
Leaders of miners in Illinois today indicated they would seek assistance of state and Federal courts against authorities of Franklin County. About 3000 diggers gathered at Reservoir Park here and heard Dan McGill,
one of their local leaders, announce efforts were being made to enlist Clarence Darrow in their fight against a reduced wage scale. Another mass meeting was held at Pana.

Plans for retaliation are to be considered at a joint conference of Illinois and Indiana miners next Thursday, when they attempted to return to the President any budget carrying more than $2,000,000,000
for purely administrative purposes.

Confidence Is Scarce.

Deciding issuance of short-term obligations by the Treasury for such spending as is not covered by revenue is but a "process of dilution," Baruch added:

"It is not money that is scarce;
it is confidence in money. If the stability of money and credit were established beyond peradventure in the eyes of all the world, timid money would rush from hiding here seeking investment, and from abroad in quest of a safe haven.
All miners who suffered wounds in the encounter were urged to get medical certificates at once.

More than 100 miners were sworn out against members of the army of 10,000 miners which laid siege to four Christian County mines Aug. 18 and forced them to close were dismissed today by State's Attorney Harry Grundy
when complainants of Peabody Coal Co., failed to appear.

The warrants charged rioting and unlawful assembly.

Immediately after dismissal of the warrants, three miners who had been named in them, applied for warrants charging perjury against three of the coal company employees who had been complainants in the robbery and unlawful assembly charges.

Circle Moss, striking miner whose wife was shot and wounded, Aug. 14, when he refused to stop for deputies guarding
Christian County, charged Homer Peacher, a guard for the coal company, with perjury and Peacher
was held in default of $2000 bond.

William Hardy, manager of Peabody
Mine No. 9, was accused by Harry Shively and made bond.
Henry Floyd, mine guard, was charged by Ray Tombois who gained public notice last week when he was arrested for parading
in front of one of the Peabody mines with a placard bearing the words, "Do Unto Others as You Would Be Done."

The perjury charges were set for trial Sept. 1 by Justice of the Peace J. W. Lowry.

At the mass meeting at Pana, attended by between 800 and 1000
miners, Gov. Emmerson, Attorney-General Carlstrom, and State Highway Chief of Police Moody were severely condemned in resolutions for "protecting mines in Christian and Franklin counties at the expense of the state and county."

Sheriff Charles Weisner of Christian County was criticized for deputizing 300 men to guard the Peabody mines when picketing by striking miners, they said in resolutions, was peaceful.

Deadman in 1928, was arrested today upon his release from Federal penitentiary at McNeil Island, and turned over to Chief of Police H. T. Hartman of Venice.

Burke will be returned at once to Madison County for prosecution. Chief Hartman said.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ERNEST C. COLLINS FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TOMORROW

Services at 2:30 P. M. for Director of the Elks' Club Orchestra.

Funeral services for Ernest C. Collins, director of the Elks' Club Orchestra and in wartime a member of the Y. M. C. A. Overseas Quartet which sang for the A. E. F., will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Wagoner chapel, 221 Olive street, with interment in Bellfontaine Cemetery.

The funeral will be under auspices of the Musicians' Union and the Elks' Lodge, of which he had been a member for 21 years. Mr. Collins died Thursday of heart disease at his home, 4708 McPherson avenue. He was 51 years old.

Before the war he was a member of the stock company at the old Princess Theater, now the Shubert-Rialto. He had directed and taken part in many music and stage programs for the Elks and other organizations. He is survived by two brothers and a sister.

Suit to construe the will of John Lunsman, who died June 1928, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday in behalf of the three minor children of his deceased son, John Lunsman Jr. The suit points out that their grandfather's estate is valued at $150,000 and is embraced in a trust fund from which they are not entitled to payments except in case of emergency until the death of their grandmother, Mrs. Lizzie Lunsman.

The petition recites that, since the death of the grandfather, their father died and left them without means of support for their education. This created, the suit states, a condition of "extremity and imperious necessity" which the will provided should exist before any heir but testator's widow had the right to enjoy any of the principal or revenue from the trust fund. The children, John E. Lunsman, 6 years old; his sister, Gloria Antoinette, 6, and brother, Herbert L. 4, have instituted the action through their mother, Mrs. Margaret Lunsman, represented by John E. and Herbert M. Hart, attorneys.

The trust provisions permit the trustees, Carl H. Witte and the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., to pay $50 for the support of the elder Lunsman's widow, who also is entitled to free occupancy of the family residence at 1521 North Seventh street. In addition, the trustees are permitted to let her have as much money as she requires for maintenance and support.

It is set forth in the suit that the net income from the trust estate is $15,000, which is $19,000 in excess of any payments provided for under the terms of the will.

The trustees, it is alleged, hold the view they are not authorized at this time to make payments to ultimate beneficiaries without instruction from the court. An interpretation of some of what constitutes an emergency by which other heirs could anticipate some of the revenue. The petitioners ask for finding in their favor.

The trustees, with Mrs. Lunsman and her daughter, Anna, are named as defendants.

A separate trust fund of $10,000 was set aside for the daughter. The elder Lunsman, eccentric and thrifty Civil War veteran, for 40 years delivered ice to downtown business houses and saved his money. He died of shock and infirmities after falling on an ash heap in a quarrel with a woman neighbor. His son, who was named as co-trustee in the will, was a baggage employee at Union Station.

Riverview drive is to be made a boulevard with double roadways, separated by a park strip between Broadway and St. Cyr avenue. One of the roadways, 22 feet wide, of concrete, is built. From St. Cyr north to a point near Chain of Rocks Bridge, Riverview has a finished 40-foot concrete roadway.

NEW ECONOMIES USED IN BUILDING OF HOMES

J. S. Taylor of Department of Commerce Discusses Points to Consider.

James S. Taylor, chief of the division of building and housing, United States Department of Commerce, has issued a summary of "New Economies in Materials and Construction," based on a talk he made before the Home Builders and Subdividers' Division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at the association's annual convention in Cincinnati.

The builder must see things in the dual terms of economy in building and consumer demand, Taylor said. He urged that all the groups who have part in the creation of the house—including designer, construction man and families experienced in selling and families with the intentions of the home owner to the house, must locate and report to each other systematically and constantly in order to get some better measure of the practical application of specific new ideas to actual family wants.

Resale value is involved. So also is the question of whether to customers a proposed new type of house would appeal. For example, a house might be all right in every respect except that a part of it would vibrate when the piano was played. Present building code enters in. The labor situation enters in.

The real estate man's problem is all this is the result of one of keeping track of current development in houses and partly one of constructive imagination in trying out and testing proposals that are more or less revolutionary, Taylor said. For example, omitting the basement is argued for and against.

"The subject of new economies in materials and construction is inseparably bound up with the problem of design and selection because in most cases a reduction in cost means some change in the product," Taylor said. "These new economies are of two types (1) evolutionary, and (2) revolutionary or radical. The first type may be illustrated by the growing use of end-matched flooring, which saves the material costs."

As an instance of the second type, a radical or revolutionary development, says Taylor, is built in sections of considerable size in a factory, in virtually if not completely finished form outside and in, to be assembled with relatively little labor on the site. The use of a one-piece window and wall section, one full story high and the width of the window, such as has been used in a number of large buildings, appears to fall between the radical and the evolutionary.

It reduces the number of parts to be put together at the site, but it does not necessarily change the main structure, and it may be considered only as one step beyond the pre-fabricated window frame shipped knocked down for local assembly, which supersedes the hand-cut frame.

"A poured concrete foundation wall involved no inherent change in design of the structure as a whole as compared with the massive bearing walls that had been used since time immemorial. However, if the main bearing is shifted from the foundation wall to corner posts or piers, as is done in some of the new systems, then it may be considered as radical, at least for houses of any size and permanence built on ordinary soils in cold climates."

BATTLE OVER WALKER NEAR FOURTH WEEK

Mayor's Counsel Indicates He Will Produce Long Parade of Witnesses.

By the Associated Press
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The Walker-Seabury battle before Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, which will enter its fourth week in Albany Monday night, has been in progress so long now that the principals have begun to greet each other with, "Hey, do we get out of the tresses by Christmas?"

It may wind up this week, although nobody would make any predictions, as the hearing adjourned for the week-end last night in a setting of frayed collars and frayed tempers.

John J. Curtin, counsel for Mayor James J. Walker, Friday began his attack on Samuel Seabury's "conclusion" that the absent accountant, Russell T. Sherwood, handled financial transactions totaling nearly $1,000,000 for the Mayor in a period of five and one-half years, and that Walker has made no effort to find Sherwood and induce him to return.

Defense Tells of Account.

Curtin opened his bombardment by introducing in evidence records to show that one of the principal Sherwood accounts, from which, according to evidence before the Hofstader Legislative Committee, the accountant made out checks to Walker's wife and sister, was in reality an account of the law firm with which Sherwood and the Mayor were both formerly associated.

Walker's counsel has indicated he will produce a long parade of witnesses, bank tellers, bookkeepers and accountants, to back up this contention, "all of which will take time."

Curtin has not indicated how much time he will take for his summing up after he gets through with his witnesses. And after he finishes, James E. Finnegan, representing the Brooklyn "No Deal" party, will present his charges against the Mayor—a set of charges separate from the Seabury "conclusions," on which the Committee of 1909 has based its demand for the Mayor's removal.

Roosevelt Rejects Argument.

One of Mayor Walker's principal defense arguments— inquiry into the motives behind the entire legislative investigation of his administration.

BERNARD O'MALLEY, DROWNING VICTIM, IS BURIED HERE

St. Louis Lost Late in Minnesota When Town Divers in Search for Missing Fisherman

The drowning of Bernard O'Malley, 4149 W. Kosuth avenue, in a lake near Starbuck, Minn., Tuesday, occurred while he was swimming into the water after the launching of a skiff with which he was having a skiff from a motorboat, his aunt, Mrs. Nellie Hester Müller of Pine Lawn, whom he was visiting at her summer cottage, said upon her return here.

Mrs. Müller said her nephew was using her motorboat to tow divers to the scene of the disappearance of C. Frank James of Needles, Kan., thought to have been drowned when fishing Monday night. She said that neither she nor her nephew had heard of a $1,000 reward which was promised from Starbuck when it had been offered for the recovery of his body.

James, 28 years old, was buried here yesterday.

MRS. D. A. McMILLEN SUES

FOR DIVORCE IN RENO, NEV.

RENO, Nev., Aug. 27.—Mrs. Eleanor Stockstrom McMillen, of New York, designer of modern interiors, sued today to divorce Drury Albert McMillen, formerly of Alton, Ill. They were married at St. Louis in 1913 and have one child. Mrs. McMillen, who is the daughter of Louis Stockstrom, St. Louis stove manufacturer, alleged cruelty.

McMillen, the son of an Alton dentist, is a mining engineer and has traveled widely since his graduation from Yale in 1909. Mrs. McMillen, a graduate of Mary Institute and Briar Cliff Manor, is the head of McMillen, Inc.

Mrs. Eleanor Stockstrom McMillen has designed some St. Louis interiors, although most of her work has been done in New York. An exhibition of eight miniature rooms of her design at the New York galleries of McMillen, Inc., was pictured and described in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine June 5.

Curtin has not indicated how much time he will take for his summing up after he gets through with his witnesses. And after he finishes, James E. Finnegan, representing the Brooklyn "No Deal" party, will present his charges against the Mayor—a set of charges separate from the Seabury "conclusions," on which the Committee of 1909 has based its demand for the Mayor's removal.

Here and There on the Air

"Old Rugged Cross"
Most Popular Hymn.

"THE OLD RUGGED CROSS" won the popular hymn contest in the poll recently conducted by Phillips Lord in his St. Parker program on N. B. C. Asking for votes from his audience, he received 26,671 for "The Old Rugged Cross," 20,438 for "Now My God to Thee," and 20,316 for "Abide with Me." Next came "Great Kindly Light," "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," "In the Garden," "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Church in the Wildwood," and "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

German Government Radio Ownership.

TO extend the power of the Government as such to broadcast its messages to the populace, yet insisting that its purpose is to get politics out of radio, the German Government has decided to nationalize its broadcasting system. Private and municipal holders of stock in the existing regional corporations, it has been invited in Washington, have been invited to sell their shares to the Government. Refusal will result in confiscation of their holdings.

By taking this step, Germany is following the recent examples of Norway, Canada and Australia, all of which have adopted the British monopoly idea in one form or another.

Feeling ran so high during the recent German elections that various broadcasting stations were made the butt of excited crowds. A mob attempted to upset one of the aerial masts of the Langenberg broadcasting station, but was stopped by the police. Later an attempt was made to set fire to the Breslau station and stones were thrown at the tubes.

Catholic and Labor Groups in Conflict

A GROUP known as the American Wage Earners' Protective Conference is asking the Radio Commission for authority to erect a new 5000-watt station in the New York metropolitan area. Mathew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, is president of the conference. The affiliation now assigned to WNLW, the Missionary Society of St. Paul, a Catholic group, are requested is the last application which says the organization represents more than 1,400,000 wage earners.

Edward D. Aber, operator of WMBH, Joplin, Mo., has applied for authority to assign his license to W. M. Roberson. The commission also received an application from KMBC, Kansas City, asking for authority to move its transmitter outside the city limits.

Studio Gossip From the Chains

THE comedy wave continues. Funny men are still in demand, and so are those gifted with the ability to write funny things so the funny men will sound funny. The big hitch is that the funny talkers get paid about 10 times the amount received by the funny writers, or rather the writers of funny things. Though Ray Knight is doing a daily dramatic program, KUKU will continue to use it. That planned broadcast by Will Beebe from the floor of the sea ought to be interesting. NBC is doing it, but the date has not been announced. NBC is spending more time and money in putting over the Three Keys than it did the Damrosch music appreciation series. They say Gene Austin rejected a movie contract because there was a stipulation that he reduce . . . Marjorie Logan, Westchester society girl, will be featured in sponsored program. . . . WINS now features a singing waiter on its programs. He is Giovanni Martine, no; no Martine.

The popularity of Crosby and Columbo seems to be on the wane, but Vallee continues on and on. . . . Ward Wilson, the mimic, is making a series of talking pictures in which his voice but not his figure is used. . . . Norman Branshaw, Harry Hershfield of "Abe Kabbie" fame has joined the radio writing ranks with a script called "Meyer, the Buyer" . . . Myrt and

Thousands of women who use Mercolized Wax are rewarded with smooth, young, glowing skin. Mercolized Wax is the best skin softener. With the face each night as it were a cold cream, Mercolized Wax adheres to the skin and gently removes the surface film in tiny minute particles. It is helpful for even skin, wrinkles, acne, and other skin troubles. Your skin looks younger, the pores are smaller, the skin is smoother, the complexion clearer. Use Mercolized Wax with a combination cream, to make more beautiful skin. Write or call me at 2845 N. Grand. Call Franklin 2824. Mrs. W. C. Weller has been using Mercolized Wax for over twenty years. Get an order at any drug store or beauty parlor and try it. It is

25-ACRE TRACT PURCHASED FOR ESTATE IN COUNTY

N. A. Cooper to Reserve 10
Acres for Home and Divide Balance Into Three 5-Acre Parcels.

CATHOLIC SISTERS
PURCHASE TRACT

Franciscus Co. Sells Two
West End Apartments—Vrooman Renews Offer
for Block.

By Berry Moore.
A tract of 25 acres on the east side of Geyer road, approximately one-half miles south of the Clayton area, in the village of Huntleigh
in St. Louis County, has been acquired by N. A. Cooper, associated with the insurance firm of F. D.
Schubert & Co. Negotiations have been handled by the W. B. Shelpley Co.

The consideration was not announced, but prevailing prices for land in this district range from $3,000 to $5,000 an acre, according to Shelp. It is understood, however, that this purchase has established a new price record for real estate in this locality. The seller is Thomas Griffin, who acquired the tract before the upward swing
in prices in this area.

It is announced that the purchaser will reserve 10 acres for a residential home and will divide
the remaining 15 acres into three 5-acre tracts, restricted to high class country estates. Development will be on a scale with the standard set by Edward L. Baker-
well in the village of Huntleigh.

Immediately adjacent on the south are the estates of Percy Orthwein, Louis Hager Jr., A.
G. Gantard, and August A. Busch.
The Country Club is close by.
The Countryside Club recently acquired through W. B. Shelp & Co. a long lease of 70 acres on the west side of Geyer road, just north of the village of Huntleigh. The club has built a stable containing 32 box stalls and laid out exercising tracks, school grounds and several miles of bridle paths. The latter are links in the system of bridle paths in this part of the county, which extend for a distance of 10 miles, including those of the Lions Country Club, Bridleup, Country Club, County Club and Westwood Country Club.

It is understood from an authenticated source that a 25-acre tract in St.
Louis County has been purchased by an order of Catholic Sisters,
through the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. Details will be withheld pending completion of plans which have been delayed by the absence of Archbishop Glennon from the speculation is keen as to the location of the tract and the improvements contemplated by the order.

West End Apartments Sold.
Predicted on offers forthcoming
within the last week, operators look forward to renewed demand in the real estate field with the advent of the fall season. It is stated that in several instances offers have been submitted with earnest money deposits, subject to owners' approval, with resultant sales, notwithstanding the divergence of opinion existing as to values.

A feature of the week was the sale by the Franciscus Realty Co.
of two West End apartment buildings available at attractive prices.
Details of the buildings and method of the purchases are not yet pending execution of record. Further sales are also reported of "Pinc" conditioned
units, financed by the Franciscus Realty Co.

The Dubinsky Realty Co., Frank Dubinsky president, announced yesterday that it had taken earnest money on a nine-family apartment building, subject to the approval of the owner. The purchase is contemplated on a cash basis.

Interested in Apartment.
Claude E. Vrooman has renewed negotiations looking to the purchase of a large west end apartment block, with stores on one of the fronts, recently foreclosed.

Vrooman was the second highest bidder at the foreclosure sale. It is understood that he has plans for developing the block, which is one of the best situated in the city for a combination structure.

He built the St.
Lindell Apartments on the south side of Lindell just east of Kingsway, which he sold several years ago to the International Life Insurance Co. at a record
price, through the Franciscus Realty Co. He recently purchased the 10-story
valto Building at the southeast corner of Fourth and Olive streets,
and is regarded as the potential purchaser of the building under leasehold.

CASTLEREAGH APARTMENT
RECEIVERSHIP IS DENIED

In a decision at Clayton yesterday, Circuit Judge Mueller denied a petition for a receiver for the Castleragh Apartments, 6820 Delmar boulevard, University City, which was sought by Mrs. Lillian
M. Hanley, holder of $2000 in first mortgage bonds on the building.
Judge Mueller, following a hearing,
said the evidence showed that William R. Orthwein and the Straus Trust Co., trustees, have managed the building satisfactorily and that there is no need for a receiver.
Mrs. Hanley filed suit last December, claiming that $14,500 in interest on $550,000 in first mortgage bonds had not been paid, and alleging that foreclosure proceedings were imminent.

The Castleragh has six stories,
containing 60 three and five room efficiency apartments, with a 40-car garage at the rear. Financing

CHAIN STORE HEADQUARTERS
LISTED BY NEW DIRECTORY

A directory of chain store headquarters for "service" chains has been published by the National Association of Real Estate Boards
through its brokers division. The list is one of four directories covering the headquarters offices of more than 10,000 store chains in 34 lines of business which are being published this year by the division as a special service to its members.

A directory of warehouse
and house furnishing chains already have been issued. The remaining list, to be published in October, will be of miscellaneous
chains.

Growth of the chain store move-
the 1932 directory with similar directories published by the association in 1929 and 1931. The 1932 directory listed altogether
4902 chains in 30 different lines of business. The 1931 publication showed 3181 chains in 36 lines of business. However the 1932 list of service store chains, which totals 1838 chains, which it had been issued late last fall, have continued instead a total of 238

chains.

BUILDING URGED UNDER EMERGENCY RELIEF ACT

ENGINEERS ASSISTING IN RELIEF PROGRAM

Associated General Contractors
Want Country to Take Full Advantage.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—All
the forces of the Associated General Contractors of America are aligned in a campaign to have the country take full advantage of the provisions of the emergency relief act to assure the fullest measure of relief intended.

The various executive departments of the association, which is comprised of all factions of the construction industry, will meet in Washington prior to the parleys of the Construction League of the United States, on Oct. 2, and the general assembly of the National Conference on Construction which is scheduled to take place on the following day. The contractors' association is a member of both these councils and has been a steadfast advocate of national construction programs as the only means available at this time to create employment, develop purchasing power and revive industry.

"The emergency relief and construction act will go for naught," the association declares, "unless the states and local communities
fully avail themselves of its construction provisions and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation acts promptly upon applications for loans so that an adequate selfliquidating construction program
may be under way before winter.
We are now devoting our full energies to this end, so that there may be definite and early relief
for unemployment and business."

The local branches and chapters
of the Associated General Contractors have been active since the passage of the relief act in encouraging the national committee on trade to develop the immediate undertaking of all worthy selfliquidating construction projects contemplated in the act. The close co-operation and intensification of this activity will constitute one of the principal topics of discussion
at both the contractors' and league
meetings.

REAL APPRAISERS' GROUP
TO HAVE OWN MAGAZINE

Publication of a new quarterly magazine devoted to discussion of real estate appraisal is announced by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The magazine, which will follow
the general plan of journals in engineering, law and other professional fields, is so far known as the "Real Estate Appraiser."

Among convention speakers will be Senator James E. Watson of Indiana and Representative Michael
K. Reilly of Wisconsin, active in passage of the bill; Carl F. Bennett of Boston, head of the committee for fostering credit expansion in the First Reserve district, and G. Prather Knapp, Chicago
financial publicist.

The National Association of Building and Loan Supervisors, consisting of State officials who preside over the State associations,
will hold its annual meeting concurrently with the first day of the league's convention.

Forsythe boulevard and the Euclid
Avenue Power Station, 600 South
Euclid avenue.

St. Louis University's School of Commerce and Finance, 3674 Lincoln boulevard, and the Herbert S.
Hadley Vocational School, 3405 Bell avenue, have also been entered in the educational buildings contest.

The Park Plaza Hotel still remains the only nominee in the multiple dwelling class. The First District Police Station at Holly Hills and Colorado avenue has been added to the Barnes Hospital Surgical buildings in the public buildings group.

In the commercial class, the Globe-Democrat Building, 1215
Franklin avenue; the Evangelical Synod Building, 1712 Chouteau avenue; the Liberty Bell Oil Co.'s station at Hampton avenue and Arsenal street; the International Shoe Co. building, 1505 Washington avenue; the St. Art. Wad-
low Co. Co-Lane Building, 324 De Baliviere avenue, have been nominated.

The two home entries are the St. Louis Mart and the Warehouse Building at Twelfth boulevard and Spruce street.

The contest this year is open to two new and reconstructed buildings which have been completed between Jan. 1, 1931, and Sept. 30.

The International Shoe Co. building is the only reconstructed structure thus far entered.

Members of the Awards Committee include Meyrie R. Rogers, chairman, director of the City Art Museum; A. H. Baum, president of the Engineers' Club of St. Louis; Prof. Gabriel Ferran, dean of the Washington University School of Architecture; Witus T. Trueblood, past president of the St. Louis

Architectural Association; and John C. Greulich, president of the American Institute of Real Estate Boards.

The John C. Greulich Realty Co.
reports the sale of a six-room residence at 461 Georgia avenue, in Ferguson, having a half acre of ground, concrete chicken house and garage, to Charlotte Schuetz. The Greulich company also represented
the seller.

RECORD NUMBER OF ENTRIES IN SIGHT AS EVENT NEARS FINISH

By Damon Kerby

The end of the trail is in sight! Only four days remain in the eighth annual Post-Dispatch Babe Ruth All-American team contest, four days in which baseball fans may enter for a chance at 65 valuable awards to be given to successful contestants.

Two hundred dollars is the first award in the contest. Second prize is $150, and $100 and $50 are the awards for third and fourth places, respectively. There will be five awards of $20 each and 10 of $10 each. In addition, 25 baseball bats, autographed by Babe Ruth, and 25 baseballs, also autographed by the Babe, will be given to successful contestants. That any one of these 65 awards is well worth the winning goes without saying.

Now Is The Time.

Thousands of Post-Dispatch readers of St. Louis and elsewhere have already sent in their All-American selections, but there are doubtless other thousands who have held off in order to watch the work of various players as long as possible.

There is no reason, now, to delay further in sending in selections. Major league stars in the latest editions of the Post-Dispatch will be the last published before the contest closes. What happens on big league diamonds between today and Wednesday will cause little if any change in the averages of players.

Therefore, today's averages should be studied carefully when contestants are forming teams, keeping in mind that only this year's performances will count with Ruth when he picks his All-American.

Great interest has been shown in this year's contest since it opened on Aug. 7. It is likely that no previous contest has been harder for contestants, due to a lack of standouts in some positions. The factor has added to, rather than decreased, the interest of students of baseball, commonly called grand stand managers.

Every major league baseball fan secretly believes—and some not so secretly—that he knows just about all there is to be known about the merits of major league players. The point is granted! Now the time to cash in on that knowledge!

Merely sit down for a half or three-quarters of an hour, study the averages, and then draw up your idea of an All-American team, naming whom you believe to be the best player in each position, and also placing them in what you think is the best batting order.

Then write an essay of explanation, not exceeding 250 words, regarding the merits of your team, and mail the line-up and essay to the Babe Ruth Editor. In the event of a tie for first award, or for any other prize in the contest, the award will be determined on the merit of the accompanying analysis.

Study the Rules.
In the accompanying rules, which should be studied before entering the contest, it is set forth that a contestant is allowed to submit only ONE team, a contestant submits more than one batting order he will automatically disqualify himself. This rule was made, and is being enforced, to keep the contest on an even basis for all contestants.

The Judges.
The judges will be three prominent St. Louisans not connected with the Post-Dispatch. They will carefully judge all eligible teams in making the final selections, and the judging will be left entirely in their hands.

Readers of the Post-Dispatch, in all sections of the country, still have time to enter the contest, as letters with postmarks not later than Aug. 31 at midnight, will be eligible for competition.

Ho, Hum!

THE melancholy days are come, The Panamas are on the bum, The sunsets in the sore, And still the world is yet to come— The Cards are shot, we fear.

The Old Percentage.

Players on the Raleigh Club of the Piedmont League are working on a percentage basis, which makes for a closer connection between the box office and the box score.

Babe Ruth claims that he has been hit by pitched balls only twice during his career.

A WONDROUS record, we must admit;

He hits 'em hard and he's hard to hit.

Though often pitchers have struck him out,

He seems immune from a body blow.

"Cuba Cleared of Betting Charge."

Now what'll you bet they don't win the pennant?

The Cubs have had 12 managers in the last nine years. Another example of the uncertainties of baseball.

No "Yes" Man.

THE issue he will never dodge: Or make a second guess;

There's no such word as "yes."

But if he thinks that any guy

Who payrolls has to meet,

Won't ask the wherefore and the why.

He's crazy with the heat.

LADYSMAN WINS $10,000 STAKE

COE COLT BEATS
HAPPY GAL RUNS
SIX FURLONGS
IN 1:11 FLAT

By the Associated Press.
SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.
Aug. 27.—Ladysman, W. H. Coe's Pempey colt, which finished second to Happy Gal in the Saratoga Special, reversed the decision with every bit of effort in the Grand Union Hotel Stake here this afternoon.
Under 127 pounds, and receiving three pounds by the scale from the tally, Ladysman merely toyed with his opposition to score by five lengths. Happy Gal was driving to take the place by a length from J.
H. Louchheim's Sandy Bill.

Ladysman, with R. Jones in the saddle, ran the six furlongs in 1:11
flat, the fastest time made in the 30 runnings of the stake, and only 3-5ths of a second away from the track mark. The colt was spiffed with Happy Gal at 13 to 5.
The race was worth $10,150 to Coe.
Jockey Jones had Ladysman under control all the way. He broke his mount on top, but wisely took back off the pace. The speedy Sandy Bill took the track, while
The Darb also stepped past the Coe star. Happy Gal, as usual, was slow to find her stride. Sandy Bill opened up a good lead rounding
the bend, but Jones shot Ladys-man around the leaders with a rush approaching the stretch and it could be seen right there that he would be the one to beat.
Straightening for the stretch, Ladysman easily took the lead and opened a wide gap. He was only galloping through the final six-teeth. Happy Gal found her running legs, despite the weight in the stretch, but could not threaten the winner. Sandy Bill barely lasted to beat Sun Capto for the show.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be determined to be independent; never afraid to attack wrong; whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

See No Relief for Individuals in Home Loan Bank Law.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
HERE seems to be a widespread impression on the part of small home owners whose loans are maturing that the newly-created Federal Home Loan Banks will be a panacea for their ills and that the banks will take up their present loans and renew them for a term of years. This impression is, in my opinion, entirely at variance with the provisions of the law, and this letter is written in the hope that, calling attention to the facts, they may avert the disappointment that surely awaits them when the banks start to function.

Section 4 (d) reads: "Any home owner who comes within the limits of this act and who is unable to obtain mortgage money from any other source may obtain same from any bank organised under this act." Section 10 (a): "Each Federal Home Loan Bank is authorized to make advances to members and non-member borrowers, upon the security of home mortgages, such advances to be made subject to such regulations, restrictions and limitations as the board may prescribe. Any such advances shall be subject to the following limitations as to amount: (1) If secured by a home mortgage given in respect of an amortized home mortgage loan which was for an original term of eight years or more, or in cases where shares of stock, which are pledged as security for such loans, mature in a period of eight years or more, the advance may be for an amount not in excess of 60 per centum of the unpaid principal of the home mortgage loan; in no case shall the amount of the advance exceed 40 per centum of the value of the real estate securing the home mortgage loan. (2) If secured by a home mortgage given in respect of any other home mortgage loan, the advance shall not be for an amount in excess of 50 per centum of the unpaid principal of the home mortgage loan; in no case shall the amount of such advances exceed 30 per centum of the value of the real estate securing the home mortgage loan."

As loans in St. Louis and St. Louis County have frequently been made up to 80 per cent of the appraised value of the property, I can see no relief from the Federal Home Loan Banks as far as the individual borrower is concerned.

The simple procedure of foreclosure governing loans made in this state, while working a hardship in many cases because of its rapid operation in case of default, makes it possible to obtain loans more favorable in amount than in states where court proceedings before foreclosure are necessary, and where redemption laws are largely favorable to the property owner.

The relief, locally, as I see it, will come to the building and loan associations, savings banks and insurance companies, who may hypothecate their loans to the extent of 50 or 60 per cent, according to the nature of the deeds of trust and the financial responsibility of the institution seeking the relief. As building associations in Missouri cannot hypothecate their mortgages under the present law, an enabling act by the incoming Legislature or an amendment to the present law will be necessary, although provision is made for loans to associations pending the enactment of such an amendment.

As the Home Loan Banks' limit of lending is 30 or 40 per cent of the present value of the property, I can see no benefit to the individual borrower whose loan is in excess of these margins.

A. R. SCHOLLMAYER.

Power and the Public.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOU are very right when you set forth the seriousness of the nation-wide power question, in relation to the ever-present franchise problem in our towns and cities. How would our people become informed on this vital problem if one of our metropolitan dailies did not print these facts? Electricity is one of the subjects standing at the heart and center of our economic situation, and grows in importance each day.

Let us all hope that our State and nation may be headed this fall by men who are alive to the rights and interests of the public in its own natural resources of water power and the generation of electric current therewith.

Danger of Watching Eclipse.

PERMANENT and serious impairment of vision may result from the attempt to watch the sun's eclipse with the naked eye on Aug. 21. As totally or partially eclipsed, carelessness individuals are tempted to gaze directly at the diminishing disk and thus do irreparable damage to their eyes. Under these circumstances the image of the sun, which is formed at the most sensitive portion of the retina, is so intense that it may damage the sensitive elements and result in a permanent blind spot.

Realizing this, everyone should take the following precautions: Until totality is reached, the eclipse should be viewed through a bit of glass uniformly etched, or, better, through a photographic film which has been fully exposed to light and developed.

Rising Prices and Unemployment

Stocks and bonds continue to rise, and so do commodities. Cotton has risen so sharply that it has electrified the whole South. Most agricultural prices are rising, and there is an advance in many raw materials. Wool prices have gone up about 25 per cent. Livestock, sugar, silver, wheat, corn, hides, butter, eggs, etc., are all higher.

Billions have been added to the market value of stocks and bonds in the upturn, and the humor of the country is naturally much better than it was. What seems to have happened is that the Europeans began buying from the United States immediately after the Lausanne conference. This caused the market to rise, and thousands of people who had been waiting for it to hit bottom tried to climb aboard. Orders poured in from all over the United States. There was nothing in industry to account for such a phenomenon. The factories were still closed, or many of them were. Such is the speculative factor in market values. Prices were down to bedrock. The people began to buy, trusting to the future to see them through. We are told that the great Mellon fortune was largely made in this way. Faith takes a great flyer whenever we have a business depression. It is when nature is too bountiful that farm boards and wheat pools and all such devices are routed.

Coincidence is a much greater factor in the field of agricultural prices than is generally realized. A collapse in farm prices always results from big crops all over the world. When Russia's wheat fails, wheat is higher. If our own corn crop is deficient, it is likely to benefit the corn growers of the Argentine. It is when nature is too bountiful that farm boards and wheat pools and all such devices are routed.

The rate at which we shall recover from the depression will depend upon how far we apply its lessons. We must have a more equitable distribution of the national wealth. We must let trade flow more freely across borders. We must get over the delusion that if we let selfish interests run the Government they will not run it for their own benefit. We must stop overcapitalizing industry, stop swindling the people out of their savings, and stop pyramidizing values until they collapse of their own weight. Nothing is worth more than it can earn. The bankers who have exploited the railroads, the financial colossi who have exploited the utilities, and the industrialists who have exploited the tariff, must all be taken in hand by the country and made to play fair. In a word, honesty must be our policy. It is the best policy.

We do not believe the stock market and the commodity market are being manipulated to any great extent, and we are glad to see values regain some of their proper levels. But we are not deceived by this heartening spectacle. We still have to deal with the greatest and revolutionary problem of putting the people to work. The best that can be said of remedial measures to date is that they have saved credit. What we must do is to restore the market, and just as fast as we can do so, we must restore wages.

Canadian Beer From Appleton

So this "Canadian" beer which may have comforted St. Louis gourmets during sultry August nights was brewed, it appears, right here on Missouri soil in dear Old Appleton itself. The reports have it that the prohibition raiders found the brewery in full blast, like a motor factory in the peak days of yore, with faithful attendants pasting Canadian labels on the bottles rolling down the production line. Superficially, the evidence looks bad. It looks like subterfuge, like deception, like palming off native goods for the imported article. But judgment may prudently be withheld. Consider the industrial custom of the times. American manufacturers by the hundreds have been establishing branch factories in Canada, and what would be more natural, pray, than that a Canadian fabricator might choose to establish a branch factory on this side the border? If the hypothesis is correct and the Canadian invader selected the Appleton establishment, well equipped and well appointed, we understand, with a reputation for excellence that roots down into history, if that is the way it was, then our bon vivants have not been imposed upon. Heimgeschmack, though it was, in a literal sense, actually it was the Canadian brew that made Kitchener, Ontario, famous. Anyhow, that is the best word of comfort we can contrive.

The Trucks and the Railroads

L. Beck of the Truck Terminal Co. recently dissenting in the Letter Column from our assertion that the railroads are at an unfair disadvantage in competing with the trucks because they maintain their own rights of way and pay heavy taxes, whereas the trucks run upon highways provided by the people and are lightly taxed.

Mr. Beck thinks the trucks have supplanted the railroads, just as the railroads supplanted earlier forms of transport. He claims for them greater flexibility, and he insists that all the regulations imposed upon them by the states are instigated by the railroads. He justifies the expense to which they put the taxpayer and the peril they occasion to other traffic on the highway upon the score of public service.

However, he does not speak to the real point of the editorial to which he replied. He does not assert that the railroads are dispensable, and we doubt if any of the truck people would care to go so far as that. Nor is it true, as he says, that we are unfair in what we say of trucks. We hold no brief for the railroads. We are interested only in the public welfare. Our point is that the railroads, an indispensable form of transport, are asked to compete with the trucks under unequal conditions. Mr. Beck makes two claims for trucks that are not, in our opinion, tenable. He says the highways were built for the convenience of the public, seeming to mean by this that the public should maintain them for any use that may be made of them. We deny it. The highways were built for the benefit of the people, but it was never intended that the people should subsidize commercial transport over them. It should versity of Toledo, a $2,000,000 addition to the Toledo Museum of Art which provided a concert hall, a school of design and exhibition space, a $913,000 Federal building, a $350,000 police and fire department headquarters together with an improved alarm system, and a $90,000 addition to the county children's home. Other Roosevelts

The guest of honor at the Hoover acceptance ceremony was Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the late President. It was fitting that the hostess of a former Republican national executive should grace the occasion, and it was a bit of campaign strategy that Mrs. Roosevelt, and not Mrs. Taft or Mrs. Coolidge, was so honored. On similar tactical grounds, the National Committee is exerting all its influence to get Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Governor-General of the Philippines, to this country for a series of campaign addresses. On this strategic front, success is not assured, however, for the Philippine provincial governors in a body have petitioned Col. Roosevelt to remain at his post, in view of important issues that are there at stake. Thus the late President's son is torn between duty and party.

The reason for this great demand for Roosevelt in the Republican campaign has to do with an amazing befuddlement among some of the voters. The G. O.

high command desires to set right and safeguard the votes of those deluded citizens who persist in thinking that Franklin D. is the son of Teddy or, confusion worse confounded, that Teddy himself is again a presidential candidate. Unbelievable as such conceptions may be, Mrs. Roosevelt reports she has received 300 letters of congratulation upon her husband's candidacy, while hundreds of other persons wrote enthusiastically pledging support to her son. To right the misconception that Franklin D. is her fifth cousin by marriage, in her choice, Mrs. Roosevelt was glad to appear at the Washington ceremony. In this day of rapid and complete news dissemination, with portraits of the Democratic candidate being broadcast far and wide, it seems almost incredible that he can be confused with the ex-President. That it does occur, however, is a tribute to the personality of Theodore Roosevelt, and to the glamour of the Roosevelt name.

does not, the fire will subside when the election is over and the blower comes off.

This better basis is demand. Economists have ascertained beyond any serious question that we are not suffering from overproduction per se, but from under-consumption. That is, the people have been without employment and therefore have not had the money with which to buy our industrial products. If it is true, as seems to be the case, that stocks are at the point of exhaustion, then the replenishment of stocks cannot help but stimulate industry in the soundest of all ways. The supply will rise to meet the demand. The rise in cotton, for instance, results in part from a smaller cotton crop and need for cotton in many parts of the world. The Japanese and Chinese have bought more cotton in the last year than Europe bought.

PRIMARY ELECTION CONTEST LAW OF 1931 HELD INVALID

Judge Hartmann Refuses to Order Recount of Ballots
in Three Wards for G. O.
P. City Committeemen.

Holding the 1931 primary election law unconstitutional, Circuit Judge Hartmann yesterday declined to issue an order requiring the Election Board to open the ballot boxes in cases in which three defeated candidates for membership in the Republican City Committee sought a recount.

In suits filed under this law the contestants alleged their successful opponents won through irregularities occurring in the count in the recent primary.

The decision was in the cases of Eugene P. Farris against William G. Kaysing, Fifteenth Ward; Albert Huber against William H. Habele, Seventh Ward, and Charles Pfeiffer against Nathan Goldberg, Sixteenth Ward.

Pfeiffer was defeated for reelection and Kaysing and Habele were re-elected as shown by the official count. Farris and Pfeiffer had filed new petitions under the general election contest law and Huber, it was said, will file a new petition this week.

Court Explains Decision.

The 1931 act limits the filing of a contest to within five days from the date the official count was certified, which was on Aug. 10. The general contest law extends the filing limit to 20 days but the suit must be filed within 15 days from the date of the opening of the term in which it is filed. Judge Hartmann held the act was passed by the Legislature after the 1930 act had been declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court for technical reasons.

Discussing his reasons for declining the 1931 act unconstitutional, the Court pointed out that the general contest law permits an appeal while the act of 1931 relating to contest of a primary nomination election provides that the judgment of the Circuit Court is final and conclusive and that no appeal will lie.

The election of a ward committee man or ward committeeman at a primary, the Court said, "is the election of a public officer and is subject to contest. Since the office of committeeman or committee woman is embraced within the general contest election law, the losing party is denied by the primary act due process of law and the equal protection of the law. The right to appeal from the decision of the court cannot be denied."

Counsel for contestants argued that even if the part of the primary act relating to appeal were declared unconstitutional, the remainder of the act would still stand and be enforceable. Judge Hartmann, however, said it was his opinion the entire law was invalid.

Critics Time Limit.
Judge Hartmann took occasion to criticize the provision of the law which relates to the time of filing and trials. It provides, that notice must be given within five days after the Board of Election Commissioners certifies the result and that there shall be a hearing on the merits within five days from the date of certification.

The working of this provision, the Court said, was impracticable and unreasonable, as it was impossible within the limited time fixed to hear the various contestants filed, pass upon the pleadings and make the necessary orders.

Seven contests for committee man and one for nomination as a candidate for the State Legislature have been filed. In most of the committee contests the plaintiffs fortified themselves by filing under both laws. The legislative contest is that of James L. Wren for one of the four Democratic nominations in the Fourth District.

His suit is directed against Harry H. Brake, Cornelius J. O'Brien, James Carroll and Andrew F. Blong.

Several days ago Judge Hartmann ordered a recount in the case of Clarence Hammond against Charles M. Reardon for Democratic Committeeman from the Twenty-third Ward. Hammond's attorney, Ernest A. Green, filed the contest under the general statute. Reardon's lawyer, Dewey S. Godfrey, agreed it was the correct procedure but denied that sufficient proof had been shown to justify a recount.

Increase in Machinery Exports.
By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—An increase of 5 per cent in exports of industrial machinery during July as compared to June was announced today by the Commerce Department.

The exports of the machinery in July totaled $4,250,000. The increases were principally in mining, oil well, pumping and textile machinery.

The Director's Training.

Rogers came to St. Louis from the Baltimore Art Museum, where he was director for two years.

Previously he had been associate professor of fine arts at Harvard, head of the art department of Smith College, and assistant curator of decorative arts at the Metropolitan Museum in New York. He was born in England 36 years ago.

The museum was established in 1879 as a department of St. Louis School of Fine Arts of Washington University. Its present building was constructed for the World's Fair and in 1909 it became a city institution.

Many of the art treasures now shown there are owned by Washington University, which hopes some day to remove them to a museum of its own.

The greater part of the museum's revenue since 1910 has been derived from a special tax of 2 cents on each $100 valuation included in the city's general property tax and measured by the assessed value of the property.

The tax income of the museum, since the city assumed responsibility for financing it, has totaled $4,242,625, and the museum's art collections are carried at a book value of $3,452,000.

The collection is most valuable in others, the estimated cost of gifts. It does not include the value of the Washington University collection, or other objects displayed but not owned by the museum.

Growth in Values.

Many works of art in the museum's collection, however, have increased in value, and under normal market conditions could be sold at twice or more than their cost.

Rogers pointed this out in his annual report two years ago, when the museum's possessions were carried at a book value of $2,857,492. Under the economic conditions then prevailing, he estimated, their actual market value was about $5,000,000. Current economic conditions have upset all criteria of value and art treasures are now said to be valued at whatever they will bring.

As typical of the normal appreciation in value of works of art, Rogers' report of two years ago mentioned that the museum had rejected an offer of $100,000 for the Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington which it bought for $15,000 in 1923. The museum has five objects of Chinese art which cost $7,000 and were later valued by an expert at $97,000. Among them is a blood-red porcelain vase for which $10,500 was paid, but which was appraised at $15,000 in the later valuation.

Carefully kept records give the total attendance at the museum since it became a city institution as more than 5,400,000. Last year 21,000 visited the galleries, and of these 5,200 were attracted by the activities of the educational department.

This department is under the supervision of Miss Mary Powell. With a staff of assistants she gives frequent illustrated talks in the galleries, dealing with the permanent collection of the museum and with temporary exhibitions which are shown there from time to time. Other talks are arranged by clubs and study groups for special occasions.

Museum's Educational Work.

A popular feature of the work of the museum is the "Museum in the Classroom" program. These are arranged for children and their parents, and special talks are given in long distance travel.

DEATH GIVES PARTIES

TIE VOTE IN SENATE

Question of Organization
Raised by Demise of Waterman of Colorado.

By the Associated Press.
ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27.—The death today of Senator Charles W. Waterman (Rep.), Colorado, raised a question of Senate organization in the next Congress. The death reduced the Republican majority of one to a tie with the Democrats. The Republicans now have 47 members, the Democrats 47 and there is one Farmer-Labor member, Shipstead of Minnesota.

There was a chance that the Republicans might still control the Senate, however, even if the Colorado Democrat chose a successor to Waterman in November for the short term between December and next March 4.

Shipstead voted with the Republicans on organization last term and if he sides with them again the result would be a tie of 48 to 48.

On the other hand, Shipstead might join the Democrats for organization purposes. In that event, and if the Democrats were successful in Colorado, they could organize the next Senate, 49 to 47.

Private funeral services for Senator Waterman will be held at the Wardman Park Hotel Monday at 2 p.m. The body will be cremated.

Waterman died at his home here after an illness of two years. At the bedside were Mrs. Waterman and Elroy N. Clark of Denver, a friend.

Waterman was 71 years old and was just completing his first term in the Senate.

He announced last April that he would not be a candidate to succeed himself, his health being a factor in the decision.

Waterman was a member of five committees of the Senate, Judiciary, Naval Affairs, Patents, Privileges and Elections and Enticled Bills. He was chairman of the last.

Waterman was born in Vermont, attended school there and graduated from the University of Vermont. After three years of school teaching, he took a law degree from the University of Michigan in 1889 and moved to Denver to practice law.

Beyond the Primitive Room lies the medieval gallery where the fourteenth century stone statue, Madonna and Child, from the seminary at Meuse, France, finds for the first time an appropriate setting in the museum which acquired it for $22,000 two years ago. Stone walls and a stone floor, soft lights filtering through stained glass windows, and falling on time mellowed sculptures and tapestries which tell of the Trojan war and King Arthur's table—far removed, surely, from the busy world beyond the museum's walls.

Far removed, too, from the barracks of the museum through those years when the art of other ages was rudely lifted from the atmosphere which nourished it and hung upon a blank wall for an uncomprehending twentieth century world to gaze upon.

For a time the Ballard gallery was most of the statues in Sculpture Hall and some remain there now. The statues are shown by American artists which Ballard gave to Washington University.

The Washington University collection includes also the Charles Parsons group of 72 paintings and many small art objects which passed into the hands of the school a year later with an important painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds, the value of which has been placed as high as $100,000. It is a portrait of the Honorable and Most Reverend Robert Drummond, Archbishop of York and Chancellor of the Order of the Garter.

Notable Paintings.

Four years ago the museum acquired a group of 13 paintings collected by the late Mr. and Mrs. John Fowler, the value of which was figured at not less than $100,000. This group, in accordance with Mrs. Fowler's will, displayed in a gallery of its own and designated as the Fowler Memorial Collection. It includes the well known Gainsborough landscape, "A View in Suffolk," a striking picture of a bald-headed woman by Hals, and a portrait of Schreyer's Arab scenes.

Others who contributed substantially to the museum's stores of art include Mrs. Eliza McMillan, Ellis Wainwright and Edward W. Mallinckrodt. Mr. McMillan, in 1925, established a $50,000 trust fund from the income of which the museum bought several early American portraits about a year ago. Wainwright, once president of the Board of Control, left the museum 24 pictures and drawings, mostly by nineteenth century French artists, and Mallinckrodt, during his life time, presented it with several paintings and objects of Japanese art. The paintings include a Lawrence portrait and a Dupre landscape.

The Catlin collection of 30 paintings given to the museum in 1917 is another notable acquisition. These pictures, mostly by French artists of the nineteenth century, were presented by Mrs. Catlin after the death of her husband, The

The pictures seemed so

Jones says he stumbled upon the idea quite by chance. He saw Mrs. Jones

HEN a young man goes in for art it is generally taken for granted that members of his family are going to have to stand for many things they wouldn't stand for otherwise. Some have to stand for eccentric mannerisms and much—oh, very much—"arty" conversation. Some have to serve as models and stand for being painted at every excuse and sometimes at no excuse whatever. Joseph Jones' family had to stand for being painted "like lumps of coal." At least, that's the way he puts it.

Jones, who is one of the most distinguished of the younger St. Louis artists and has won several prizes in local exhibitions, has just rounded out an extraordinary family group of paintings with a portrait of his mother. The group, comprising also paintings of his wife and father, was undertaken as an experiment to see whether the painter, divesting himself of all sentiment and approaching his subjects as he would approach inanimate objects, could still catch their personalities and characteristics through mere reproduction of form and color.

He then determined to try other members of the family and "see what they would look like when all lined up."

His father, Frank J. Jones, who lives at 4561 Maffitt avenue, around the corner from Joseph's home and studio, Kennerly and Marcus avenues, was the next victim. About all he attempted in painting his father, he explains, was to fill in a composition and establish a likeness as far as possible through a characteristic pose. This was accomplished largely through the hand and arm and the elder Jones' inevitable hat. Attempts to place him in a more or less conventional portrait pose, facing the artist, were unsuccessful because the elder Jones has lost an arm and the artist did not wish to have this show in the painting. The elder Jones says he doesn't mind the back view. It's probably as good as the front and maybe better, he thinks. "The worst thing about the whole business was sitting there all that time beside an empty bottle."

"When I set out to paint my mother," Jones relates, "I expected to be hampered by sentiment and the things a fellow ordinarily feels for his mother, but was surprised to find I was able to approach her, too, as a total stranger. Painting her as just an object, I found, was the real test, because at any time except when I'm painting I feel the things that usually get into the 'Mother' portraits done by most artists. I was glad to find I could get away from it. Even Whistler couldn't get away from it. His famous portrait called 'My Mother' was originally intended as a purely objective study in black and white. But it didn't turn out that way. He scarcely realized it himself until he saw it in an exhibition. Then, upon seeing so much sentiment had crept into it, he changed the name and called it 'My Mother.'

"I should think that a look at this portrait would be enough to inspire any artist to try to paint his mother with the sentiment left in, but, as it happened, I tried to do it the other way. I left out all personal feeling and tried to paint just what I saw from an artistic standpoint. I found that it is the best way, at least the best way for me, to get a picture. I believe if you will copy an object as an object and don't bother with a lot of interpreting you'll get a better picture. The characteristics will show. In this case, all my mother's ruggedness and strength of character show up without any trace of sentimentality. It isn't pretty or flattering. Neither is the portrait of my wife. But I don't think a picture has to be pretty in order to be beautiful."

"It may be considered a little merciless and even brutal to jump on one's nearest relatives and try to turn them inside out like this," Jones went on. "But there was nothing vindictive or ill humored about it. They didn't mind and I had a lot of amusement out of it. Now that they are accustomed to the idea, they wouldn't have their portraits any other way. They have had busy lives, all of them. They have had to struggle and still have to struggle. That will show up in a portrait if the portrait is what it ought to be, and the picture, like the subject, is stronger because of it."

Jones, who is 23 years old, is a house painter by trade. He has never spent a day in art school. He paints entirely to please himself, he declares.

He points to the portrait of his father as an example of how he violates accepted rules in painting to please himself. Many observers contend that the composition revolves about an empty corner; that the eye of the observer is led into the corner and left there with nothing of particular interest to fasten upon. Jones argues that the eye does not come to rest in the corner and does not need any central object to fasten upon because it is caught up again by the swing of the circular composition and carried around again. The violence of this circular movement, he believes, counteracts the need for a strong central object.

Jones' latest recognition came with acceptance of two paintings for the Exhibition of American Artists now in progress at the St. Louis Art Museum. The show, described by Meyric Rogers, director of the museum, as the most notable American show held here in many years, will remain on view for about two months. Usually only one painting by any one artist is selected by the jury. Jones' paintings are "River Front" and "Still Life."

Making the Same Talkie Speak in Any Language

"Doubles," Speaking Into Synchronized Microphones; Say Words Prepared for Them by Skilled Translators—and the Lip Movements of American Stars Seem to Produce Foreign Phrases.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

BERLIN. WHEN the movies went talkie, producers around the world were confronted with a very serious problem. Language had been no barrier to the free circulation of films to every part of the globe. It was a simple matter to change the captions from English to Chinese or Czechoslovakian or what have you and insert them in the film. Then came the talkies. And it was speedily discovered that an audience in Prague had practically no desire at all to sit listening to a language that it couldn't understand.

Export sales of all film companies dropped to virtually nothing. Hollywood tried filming each picture three or four times in three or four different languages, making the stars polish up their French, German and Spanish. But this was not very satisfactory. Again, foreign stars were substituted for the Hollywood product and the same picture was screened several times on the same set, with different groups of players. This was too expensive.

Now comes the latest development, the specialized studio that internationalizes talking films into various languages—fits onto an American film the French, German, Spanish dialogue so that it synchronizes with the action of the picture, specifically with the movements of the players' mouths. Such are the Jofa Studios.

This, the Topoly process, is very difficult and delicate. First, the original dialogue, the sound track, must be divorced from the action part of the film. Then to duplicate films are fitted the German version, the French, etc., making the players seem many-tongued when in reality they have been doubled for on the sound track.

The chief difficulty is in timing the substituted words to the action and fitting each word to the lip movements of the actors, as already made on the film, so that a character pronouncing an English word in an English film, for example, may be seen speaking an equivalent word in, say, the French version without it being apparent from the movements of his mouth that he was talking not French, but English, when the picture was made. Shape the lips for "kiss" and then for the French equivalent, "baiser", and the obstacle is apparent.

The first step in the process is the numbering of each individual "frame" or picture. This is done automatically as the picture is made. An expert then takes the film and writes down the original dialogue, at the same time placing against each syllable of each word the number that it bears in the film. It is then the translator's task to fit French dialogue to this English script, so that syllables and words fit as precisely as they fit in the English version.

The expert underlines certain syllables. This denotes a pronounced lip-motion. The translator must find words in which there are the equivalent sounds so as to obtain complete congruity. When the new dialogue is completed, it is put onto large discs, one for each actor, in such a way that there is a numbered space on the disc for each frame in the film.

The actor stands in a booth facing the disc on which is his part. It is synchronized with the film-projector. An electrical pointer lights up the words or syllables on his disc which correspond to the lip movement on the screen. Thus a half dozen actors stand silent and tense in a series of booths, facing their individual discs, beneath each of which is a microphone.

They look out onto the screen on which the film is being run off. The film begins, the discs begin to revolve. One by one, as the electrical pointer indicates, they speak their parts.

After the new dialogue is recorded, it is wedded to a silent print of the film.

FOR two months Glassford had handled a precarious situation without disorder or bloodshed. Under his steady pressure the bonus army was slowly but surely leaving town. He had reasoned with the men, pointed out to them that they could accomplish nothing for themselves by remaining in Washington, especially after the adjournment of Congress, and that they were setting a bad example to the country. Under his sympathetic but firm pressure the army of the veterans had dwindled from in excess of 15,000 at its peak to less than half that number. He believes that in another few weeks he could have had all the rest on the way home.

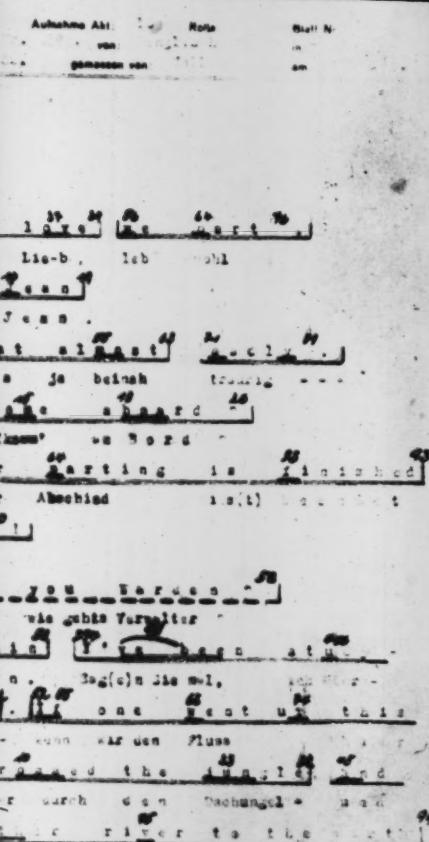

On the fateful day that was to cost the lives of two veterans, Glassford had registered his protest against the summary ouster. He had been overruled. A less popular man than Glassford probably would have lost his official job, once the "battle of the bonus" was over. He did not much care if he did. He took the police job a year ago more as an adventure than a vocation. Major-General Crosby, who had been made a District Commissioner with supervision over police affairs when he retired from the army, had forced him into the job. Not only was it notoriously thankless, but just after his appointment Glassford received a letter from a Washingtonian offering him assistance and stating, with unconscious, if grim humor, that he had aided four of Glassford's predecessors, all of whom had either died from overwork in office or been forced to quit because of broken health.

Glassford—the man with the pipe—at a show given by the bonus marchers before their retreat.

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

WASHINGTON, D. C.

S RAGGED veterans, bitter and amazed, retreated before the glistening bayonets and the prancing steeds of United States troops on that unhappy day that marked the bonus marchers in the Nation's Capital, as grim United States officers, in their creased uniforms and shining leather, advanced on the veterans' main camp at Anacostia after having put the poor billets in the heart of Washington to the torch, another army officer, retired—he had been no less than a Brigadier General of regulars—sped about the city on a blue motorcycle, his mission one of peace and conciliation. He was Pelham D. Glassford, Washington's Superintendent of Police. He was clad in a policeman's blue uniform, minus the coat. He wore a policeman's blue cap, with the silver insignia of the department upon it. He had on a blue shirt, sweat-saturated and somewhat frayed. Early in the day a veteran had torn off the police badge which was pinned to the shirt. One shoulder was smudged with brick dust, and Glassford from time to time felt of it gingerly. There was a black and blue spot underneath. He kept his teeth clamped upon the stem of black brier pipe. He was perpetually in motion—ubiquitous. He rode rapidly from place to place upon his blue motorcycle and as the weary veterans struggled out of town they could stop, now and then, when they caught sight of him, to wave and cheer.

FOR two months Glassford had handled a precarious situation without disorder or bloodshed. Under his steady pressure the bonus army was slowly but surely leaving town. He had reasoned with the men, pointed out to them that they could accomplish nothing for themselves by remaining in Washington, especially after the adjournment of Congress, and that they were setting a bad example to the country. Under his sympathetic but firm pressure the army of the veterans had dwindled from in excess of 15,000 at its peak to less than half that number. He believes that in another few weeks he could have had all the rest on the way home.

On the fateful day that was to cost the lives of two veterans, Glassford had registered his protest against the summary ouster. He had been overruled.

A less popular man than Glassford probably would have lost his official job over the "Battle of the Bonus." He did not much care if he did. He took the police job a year ago more as an adventure than a vocation. Major-General Crosby, who had been made a District Commissioner with supervision over police affairs when he retired from the army, had aided him into the job. Not only was he notoriously thankless, but just after his appointment Glassford received a letter from a Washingtonian offering him assistance and stating, with unconscious, if grim humor, that he had aided four of Glassford's predecessors, all of whom had either died from overwork in office or been forced to quit because of broken health.

sentment against Glassford was short-lived.

He put on a uniform, requisitioned a motorcycle. The writer had reason to remember that motorcycle. He was driving to a dinner engagement one evening and, being late, was stepping on the gas. He heard the chug-chug of a motorcycle behind him, and, in the mirror, saw a blue-uniformed cop on his heels. The motorcycle clung. As he turned into a driveway, the motorcycle followed. Glassford dismounted. He was hurrying to the same dinner engagement—too busy to change from his uniform.

"Happy" Glassford, so-called from West Point days because of his expansive, engaging smile, had been offered a job commanding the state police of a New England state, but had turned it down because, as he said, it had the highest standing in the community as it was; the group was efficiently officered. He preferred commanding the disorganized and, at the time he took it over, demoralized Washington force. As he told his friends, he had everything to lose by stepping into an already established, efficiently run job, but little to lose in taking over one that was already in bad odor. Besides it was a new adventure for a man younger than his years—though he was only 49 on August 8—with time on his hands.

It was his unswerving directness, his conception of duty, as well as his unusual experience, that prompted the New England state to seek his services, for at the outbreak of the World War he had been sent to this State to inspect and report on a certain National Guard outfit, then locally distinguished more for its social than for its military importance.

Socially prominent young men about town were in command. They received Glassford royally, treated him to their most indulgent hospitality, which he could not escape. He reported to the War Department that the National Guard outfit in question ought either to be completely reorganized or disbanded altogether. Probably that blunt military verdict was something of a shock to the victims, but it was to Glassford they turned when they wanted the most compassionate man they could find after the war.

On the fateful day that was to cost the lives of two veterans, Glassford had registered his protest against the summary ouster. He had been overruled.

A less popular man than Glassford probably would have lost his official job over the "Battle of the Bonus." He did not much care if he did. He took the police job a year ago more as an adventure than a vocation. Major-General Crosby, who had been made a District Commissioner with supervision over police affairs when he retired from the army, had aided him into the job. Not only was he notoriously thankless, but just after his appointment Glassford received a letter from a Washingtonian offering him assistance and stating, with unconscious, if grim humor, that he had aided four of Glassford's predecessors, all of whom had either died from overwork in office or been forced to quit because of broken health.

"Happy" Glassford took the job with no illusions. Many of the police resented him, as they resented having any army officer brought in from the outside and put in command. The re-

began assembling. It may be that the Communist band, drummed out of the B. E. F. camps and forced to pitch their own camp separately, started the trouble. It is possible, though not probable, that agents provocateurs were the ring-leaders. In any event, as Glassford's policemen began to order the veterans out of their barracks in the partly demolished old brick buildings still left standing on the lower end of Pennsylvania Avenue, as police were forced to carry some out bodily, the brick-heaving began.

The alarmed District Commissioners were not content to let their police chief deal further with their order, which had precipitated the struggle.

Again over his protest, they sent a letter to President Hoover asking for troops, and the troops came.

This police chief, who believes in a doctrine of humane treatment despite his martial training, who handled the "hunger marchers" on their invasion of Washington without any of the usual harshhanded police methods, who similarly shepherded a Communist parade without resort to police clubs, who was not afraid to make speeches in his power that need not annoy him.

Glassford was born in Las Vegas, N. M., on Aug. 1, 1884, the son of W. C. Glassford, a carpenter.

He was educated in Las Vegas, and graduated from the University of Arizona in 1906. He then taught in the schools of the state for four years.

He then became a member of the General Staff at Fort Riley, Kansas.

He graduated from the War College, from which he graduated in 1924; then

three years as instructor there; a year

at Fort Sill; nearly a year on duty at the Inspector General's Department in Washington; two years on the General Staff as chief of the mobilization branch of G-2.

He retired at his own request on July 31, 1931, after 31 years of service, in order to take over the management of a family ranch near

Phoenix, Arizona, and to indulge his inclination to paint. He had spent a year at the National School of Fine

and Applied Art in Washington, and pursued this study further at the San Francisco Art Institute.

Whatever he might have made of a career in art was at least temporarily

interrupted by General Crosby's insistence that he run the Washington

police force, at a salary of $8000 a year—which he has not drawn of late,

nor has he been able to draw his army

pension of $4330, because of red tape

in the Controller-General's office, yet to be unraveled and having to do with the economy program which permits a man to draw but one pay check from the Government.

Glassford has an insatiable interest,

dynamic energy and unusual talents.

He is enough of a musician to play a violin more than moderately well. He is enough of an artist to do rather good oils and murals.

His own vice squad, raiding a local

speakeasy only a few days ago, gasped

with astonishment when they saw

upon the walls a large painting of a blood-curdling pirate scene. The signature of the artist was Pelham D.

Glassford. Glassford had done it, before he became police chief, for a night club, which subsequently degenerated into a speakeasy. But his talents were not merely at the command of night clubs. Local churches have others of his pictures on more orthodox themes than piracy.

The Paperhanger Who Claims To Be the Son of the Wendel Millions

Miss
Ella
Wendel.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine

John G. M.
Wendel.

Wendel by a secret marriage. The jammed courtroom—always packed for Wendel hearings—held its breath.

The witness blinked at the Louis XV chandelier, with its glittering crystals, blinked at the crowd, blinked at the Surrogate; produced a pill box and extracted therefrom a white pellet designed to thwart angina pectoris, form of heart disease. Throwing back his head, he flapped in the pill and swallowed.

Deeply annoyed, Surrogate Foley pinched his noseglasses. He moistened his lips. A dignified and ceremonious man, he was as much upset as if the paperhanger had walked into the august walnut-paneled chamber and said: "Your Honor, I am a paperhanger and I have the hives." It was ludicrous and a little outlandish; quite out of order. Yet the man had a plausible story and challenging evidence.

"This," said the Surrogate, "is either a monstrous hoax or a most unusual story." Naturally, since everyone had supposed Wendel to have been a bachelor and a particularly irritable one.

Thus dramatically did Thomas Patrick Morris, in his fifty-second year, walk into the Wendel will case and toss a monkey wrench into the machinery. Surrogate Foley had laboriously set up in his effort to determine the rightful heir, or heirs, to the estate of Ella Virginia von Echtzel Wendel, last of the family, who died last year, leaving property valued at a minimum of $30,000,000.

Ella willed the entire estate to hospitals, seminaries and foreign missions, mostly of the Methodist Episcopal faith, but this case was no exception to the rule of "where there's a will there are relatives," and more than 1800 persons living in widely separated places filed claims of relationship and petitioned for the right to sue to break the will. One whole German village claimed distant blood ties. Aided by counsel for the estate, Surrogate Foley drew up an elaborate chart setting forth the degrees of relationship of the claimants.

The closest degree was the fifth, and some 24 fell into this charmed circle. These, it was indicated, would probably be permitted to sue.

Some sold their rights to the institutions named beneficiaries in Ella's will.

Others declined to sell out, believing their chances of breaking the will to be favorable.

Now along comes Morris, claiming to be John's son, Ella's nephew, and if he can prove this, it means that he has blown the cover off the case and left the army of distant relatives in the lurch.

Counsel for the estate arose and sent forth a barrage of questions. The man was an impostor. He would show the Court that this was true. He would bring documents, records and witnesses to controvert this absurd yarn. The more than 100 barristers representing claimants inwardly applauded. Good old counsel for the estate! Go to it, old man! Counsel went to it and, after several days of cross-examination, rested. He had seemingly punctured some details, had cast doubt on others, but, in the main, the story seemed to stand up and remained for the Surrogate to decide whether it was "a monstrous hoax or most unusual story." Which it was—this bid for the fortune founded by John G. M. Wendel, grandfather of John Gottlieb and his six sisters—had not been decided when the hearing was adjourned the other day until October.

Among other things the story does, if authentic, is to alter certain points in the Wendel tradition, which has for years been a newspaper saga of warped lives within a Fifth avenue mansion, swallowed up by the roar of business.

THE saga has it that after the death of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Wendel, John Gottlieb, a selfish old bachelor, dominated the lives of his six sisters, forbade them finery, chased their would-be suitors from the house and ruled them with an iron will, so that they withered like so many leaves and died, surrounded by a wall of gold; that the last survivor, Ella, was meek, mild, patiently submissive to her brother's wishes. The revised saga, if it is to be recast along the Morris lines, will reveal John Gottlieb as a clumsy, lumbering, soft-hearted old man, with perfectly legitimate son in the background, but unable to introduce the child into his own house because of the hostility of his sisters.

The Morris story contends Wendel secretly married an Irish girl resident of Edinburgh, that a son was born, that the mother deserted the child in a quarrel over religion; tells of the child's life in the home of foster parents in Dundee, Scotland; of paternal visits by Wendel to the growing son, the latter's eventual emigration to America, years of struggle as mill hand, miner, painter, paperhanger—year upon year of discouraging poverty, without knowledge that Wendel was a man of wealth; accidental discovery, while rummaging among the newspapers in his basement, that the last Wendel—Ella—had died, leaving a huge estate; that John Gottlieb had long since passed on. And then—Morris' day in court.

According to Morris (and he produced a discolored old marriage certificate in attempt to prove it), Wendel married Mary Ellen Devine in New York City in 1876. Several years later, after the birth of a son, the mother passed out of the picture completely. Afraid of the scandal it would create among his sisters if it became known that he had married and had then been deserted by the girl, Morris said, Wendel placed the boy in the home of Peter and Margaret Morris, in Dundee, and the child took their name. His mother had insisted on the Thomas Patrick.

Almost every summer Wendel made a trip from New York to visit and play with his son. Morris declared, glibly reeling off the names of the ships Wendel traveled upon.

"He would pick me up and hug me and kiss me and let me play on his knee," Morris testified. "He told me to call him 'Papa Wendel,' and I did."

Morris related that he quit school at 14, worked in a jute mill and a shipyard and spent some time at sea. After a brief term in the militia, he returned to live with his foster parents.

Thomas Patrick Morris looking at the Wendel family chart drawn up by Surrogate Foley.

Thomas Patrick Morris Dramatically Pops Into the Famous Will Case That Has Attracted More Than 1800 Claimants.

In 1901, Wendel came for his usual visit, the witness continued, and one day, apparently disturbed emotionally, suggested they take a walk along the Hedgey road, out past rural homes and wooded sections. In the midst of the jaunt, he halted and handed the youth a book and a watch and chain, the latter his birthday present. The book was "The Blockade of Phalsburg," an historical novel by Emile Erckmann and Alexandre Chatrian. A dull enough gift for a young man, Morris thought.

"In this book" Morris quoted Wendel as saying, "you will find some writing. Read and don't even show it to anybody."

"Then," said Morris, "he started to say something and began to cry. I looked away and never did ask him what he started to say."

On returning home, Morris said, he inspected the book more closely and found that on the front fly-leaf had been written in ink a letter addressed to him and signed with Wendel's name; on the back flyleaf, a will.

The text of the letter was:

"March 1st, 1901.—My Dear Son: I am writing you this to clear up any doubt you might have in your mind as to your parentage."

"I, John G. Wendel of 442 Fifth avenue, N. Y. City and Mary Ellen Divine of Edinburgh, Scotland, were married at Castle Garden, June 11, 1876, promising to marry her later on in the church of her faith, the Roman Catholic. My family being Methodist, I refused to carry it through, I was kept busy through the death of your grandfather, straightening out matters, and in the latter part of May, 1879, your mother and I quarreled, and being with child fled to friends, Mr. and Mrs. Morris living at 4 John St., Dundee, Scotland. I followed and tried to make a reconciliation but allowed religious scruples to stand in the way.

"You were born the 3rd of January, 1880. Your mother still refusing to be reconciled, about two weeks after your birth disappeared leaving you in bed while our friend was out shopping. Fearing the scandal and that the news might drift back to my family in the States, I failed to report it. I arranged with our friends to register your birth as their own and care for you, living in hopes your mother would return. My hopes were in vain. You were registered as Thomas Patrick Morris, the first two names the wish of your mother, whom you dearly loved."

"The foregoing statement is true,

"So help me God."

"Your loving father,

"JOHN G. WENDEL."

AND the text of the fly-leaf document which purported to be the millionaire's will was:

"I, John G. Wendel of the City of New York County of Kings and State of New York do declare that owing to my sisters, especially Mary and Ella's objections and refusal to recognize my son by a secret marriage and their threats to publicly expose me and fearing the destruction of my will, I take this unique way to safeguard same and My Sons interest. I hereby make, publish and declare this to be my last Will, thereby revoking all former Wills made by me."

"1) I direct that all my just debts be paid."

Of later events, Morris gave the following account:

Ignorant of the financial standing of Wendel, who always dressed plainly and wore clumsy brogues with soles almost an inch thick, Morris shipped for America as "chief greaser" of a vessel which landed in New York in July, 1907. Then he "jumped ship" and searched for a job. The hunt was unsuccessful, and after several days he landed on one of the benches of City Hall Park. Here he chance on old John Wendel. They had frequent meetings thereafter, Wendel giving him small sums of money while Morris lived by doing odd jobs of house painting. Then one evening Wendel suggested they go to the home on Fifth avenue to which Morris might meet his aunts.

Other bits of evidence favorable to Morris included the will written on the fly-leaf, the letter on the fly-leaf and the marriage certificate. There was also a letter, purporting to be from Wendel, dated April 6, 1897, apologizing for tardiness in sending a remittance. The handwriting in this was conceded by some to be the same as that in the will. Besides, there was the letter from a foster sister of Morris stating that her mother on her

NEW YORK. OT from a visitation of divine inspiration, nor from a blow with a blunt instrument, nor by virtue of a rash or a heart stepped upon did Margaret Fishback take to writing verses, but from sheer "venom." The venom was not directed at men (they were all right, even desirable in some cases), nor against the racking and pinching of life (life wasn't bad), nor any of the usual things that cause people to become peculiar, breathe their hot souls into eternal dactyls and iambics and try to chisel them into print.

"It was simply because I resented the state of worship in which people hold writers, as if they were persons apart or beings who caught things from the pure, white clouds which the rest of us were unable to understand," says Miss Fishback. "I refused to believe such things as verse were so hard to write, so I sat down and doped out a couplet. That was more than five years ago. I signed it 'Marne' and sent it to F. P. A., whose Conning Tower then ran in the New York World. He printed it and I wrote a lot more, some of which he used. This kept on and, thus encouraged, I started sending my verses to magazines. The New Yorker and Vanity Fair and some others began to buy them. Just lately I've been writing a few short stories. I sold my first one just recently. But I have no illusions about being a poet or a writer. I'm not literary. I do things by ear. Verse, for instance. After I started writing it, I thought I ought to study up on it and get good. So I bought a book on versification but never have read it. Of course, I can tell a triplet from a sonnet, and a few things like that, but I'm very shy of real technical knowledge."

Voicing his disgust with the family and New York, Morris roamed the country, working at various jobs. He was "through" with his supposed parent and determined to live his own life. Queerly enough, according to the story, his trail crossed Wendel's once more, this time when he was working in a copper mine in Arizona. He saw the bulky figure in a group of mine directors and ducked in a doorway until they passed. He had no notion Wendel was one of the directors because of his loose dress, Morris said. He was sure of only one thing—he didn't want anything to do with Wendel.

Her verses come at odd moments. One slithered into being nicely and easily while she was taking a bath at a summer resort. Titled "Triplet in a Maine Bathtub," it goes: "The view from here is quite divine; A nice tub I never knew. Outside the window there's a pine. The view from here is quite divine; An etching that I wish were mine. So sweet it is against the blue. The view from here is quite divine; A nice tub I never knew."

Others pop into bus as she walks through Manhattan crowds or drinks in the Fifth avenue scene from a bus top. A sample:

Hell's Bells. The ambulance flies at furious gait That registers utter defiance of fate, As clanging through traffic quite agile and supple, It picks up one person and knocks down a couple.

Many of her published pieces deal with the love problems of a modern girl in the approved modern manner. Here Miss Fishback shows less originality of viewpoint than in simpler, more casual and happier themes. But one stands out and will bear reprinting. Here it is:

He raised his hand to strike me, and then he didn't. He put his arm around my neck and we walked down Thirty-ninth street to a car. When we got there, he gave me a watch and chain and a $20 bill."

HE day I talked with her she wore a black straw hat (sailor, I believe it is called) and a print dress. That much is certain because she said it was. She doesn't care for print dresses very much because they are worn so much by hefty ladies, who shouldn't be wearing them. Most women look better in solid colors, she thinks. She wouldn't have been wearing this print dress except that she wanted something cool and prints are manufactured cooler than the plain colors. Soon, she says, solid colors will be made lighter weight and that will be fine. She likes to wear evening clothes and feel lovely.

A prisoner in Missouri State Penitentiary at Jefferson City asked for a copy of the book because, he said, life was very monotonous among the felons. He was there through a misunderstanding, it seems. A man in Wisconsin wrote that he would buy one if he ever scraped together a few dollars that didn't have a first and second mortgage on them.

He said he had tried to read the whole book at a bookstall and would have finished but his feet got tired. I almost got writer's cramp autographing copies for friends. Each wanted something clever along with it, which stymied me completely.

"Our potato spearer and projector (device with a collapsible extension) is good clean fun for all concerned, with the possible exception of the hot potato or beet involved as ammunition."

"Here's a good clean story for rural circulation, and it's true, too, though it sounds a shade fishy. We're selling 40 cakes of Macy's Bouquet Soap in a box covered with gingham paper, for 98 cents."

"Electric hair dryers are $4.64 and worth it unless you are completely bald."

"A sandwich with a good figure tastes better than the old home week type though right now we'd eat anything we were offered. Six canape cutters, 42 cents."

"We have a nut cracker which cracks the jackets without mangling the meats. It sounds fishy to us but the buyer swears it works, so give it a chance. 74 cents."

"The secret perhaps (and it may as well come out) is that Miss Fishback was one of the very first persons to perceive that there is a barrel of fun in a nutmeg grater or a nut cracker or an underwear sale. One of her gems last January called attention to the merits of a brand of women's underwear, as follows: 'Health mesh underwear is soft and smoothly woven. It comes from Germany and is spreading all over this section of the country. Ask for Dr. Lahmann's underwear. Oh go ahead.'

BUILT A MODEL PRISON— and CAN'T GET ANY PRISONERS

The California Institution for Women in the Cummings Valley, and, below, grim San Quentin Penitentiary.

By
A. L. WOOLDRIDGE
A Special Correspondent
of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine

SAN FRANCISCO. THE women of San Quentin Prison on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco Bay heard the news.

"You're leaving here. No more cells. No more high stone walls. No more armed guards. No more listless, daily routine. You're moving into pretty, homelike cottages away down in the Cummings Valley at the base of the Tehachapi Mountains. There in the sunshine and amid gardens of flowers you are to rehabilitate yourselves and can thank the club-women for bringing about a grand improvement in your living conditions. Your real prison days soon will be ended."

Murderesses, check forgers, husband-slayers, female thieves, narcotic addicts, pickpockets and all the flotsam and jetsam which usually land in prison wards, merely sat and stared. Surely there must be some mistake! Things don't happen that way to women in penitentiaries.

They had grown accustomed to San Quentin and come to accept it as home. Thoughts of a cottage with trees and flowers and birds, out in the great open spaces over which fresh breezes blow had, for many, long been discarded. For, they knew, they were felons, so adjudged by the courts of law.

San Quentin they hadn't found so bad except for the enforced incarceration. Kept scrupulously clean, it afforded little work to do and many hours for recreation. Each woman had the privilege of tidying up her cell as she saw fit and each was free to sew handkerchiefs and dollies to be disposed of at an annual sale in San Francisco and thus earn spending money.

The idea of suddenly being removed from these surroundings to life on a "farm" was almost beyond their comprehension and it took a deal of explanation to make them understand. Club-women of San Francisco, they were told, had decided that women locked behind prison walls usually come out lost souls, downcast, embittered and lacking further interest in life. How much better it would be, they thought, if these wayward sisters could be moved to some quiet, sunshiny place out of doors and a home provided without stone walls and iron bars.

The club-women were thoroughly convinced that something should be done about it so they started a campaign back in 1929 for a State appropriation and got $500,000 with which to buy a site of 1682 acres in the south-central part of the State and erect a series of dwellings, done in Norman style, each large enough to house 29 inmates. An administration building and other necessary "settlement" houses, including a chapel, were included. The construction work was completed last May.

The 120 woman prisoners in San Quentin had new hope. For two years, during conversation hours, they talked of their new home, of the broad valley they were told spread out before it in which wild poppies grew; of raising chickens and turkeys and rabbits for other State institutions and of becoming real farm women.

Clara Phillips, hammer-murderess, took a keen delight in explaining to others what the change would mean. Clara Phillips, it will be remembered, got Alberta Meadows into a motor car in Los Angeles a decade ago, drove to a lonely spot in the hills and killed her because she believed Alberta Meadows was trying to steal her man. She was sent to the penitentiary for life.

Imprisoned with Clara Phillips was Mrs. Louise Peete, who killed Jacob C. Denton in Los Angeles in 1920 and laid his body away in a bed of cement in the basement of her home. Mrs. Peete was willing to go. Then there was Mrs. Margaret B. Willis, who slew Dr. Benjamin Baldwin in April, 1924, and calmly confessed the crime. She admitted her willingness to move to the country.

There was the mother of Gordon Stewart Northcott, who lives solely with her memories—memories of her boy, who slaughtered two lads on a chicken farm near Riverside, California, dismembered their bodies and buried them piece by piece. Mrs. Northcott was convicted as an accomplice because she tried to shield her son. She sits long hours alone, rocking and sewing, rocking and sewing. She knew all about farm life.

HERE was Edna Sharpe, who'd had a hand in kidnapping a child in San Francisco and who sobs audibly when prison motion pictures show children on the screen. And Bobbie Cunningham, the elderly woman who killed her young sweetheart because he threatened to leave her.

The Negro women, too, hailed the prospective move as an emancipation. The pickpockets, check forgers, etc., showed interest. San Quentin womanhood was ready to move.

Last May 22, the new California Institution for Women was dedicated. Governor James Rolph was the principal speaker. Others included Miss Eleanor Miller of Pasadena, the Assemblywoman who introduced the bill making erection of the institution possible; Daniel J. O'Brien, director of penal institutions for California; Col. Walter E. Garrison, director of Public Works, and Mrs. Ernest Wallace of Alhambra, one of the prime movers in the cause. Warden Holohan of San Quentin, Warden Smith of Folsom Prison, Director Neumiller of the State Prison Board, Ed Whyte, State Parole Officer, and Miss Alicia Mosgrove, who had been chosen superintendent, were present.

"This is all paid for," said Governor Rolph in his speech. "It is being dedicated to the generosity of the people of California who made it possible, along with the entire balance of the $9,000,000 program of State institutional betterment we have undertaken. The taxpayers of the State under this program are caring for all the State's wards—the blind, lame and halt, the insane and incurable. Here in this institution will be cured of their physical, mental and moral ills, women who have been forced here by circumstances of which we know little, their woman hearts torn by adversity, to live a portion of their lives in a city of usefulness."

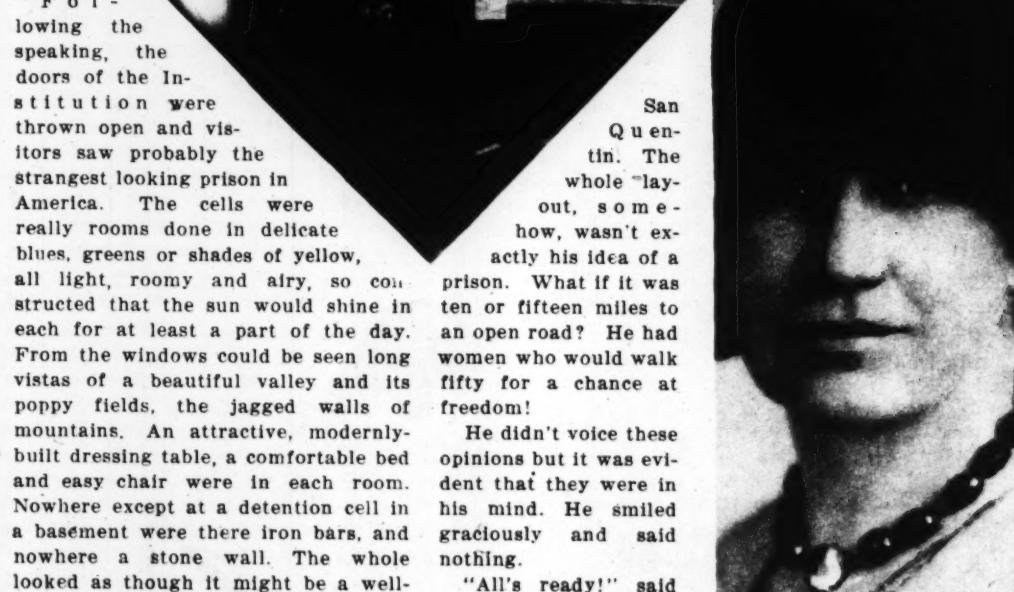

Following the speaking, the doors of the institution were thrown open and visitors saw probably the strangest looking prison in America. The cells were really rooms done in delicate blues, greens or shades of yellow, all light, roomy and airy, so constructed that the sun would shine in each for at least a part of the day. From the windows could be seen long vistas of a beautiful valley and its poppy fields, the jagged walls of mountains. An attractive, modernly-built dressing table, a comfortable bed and easy chair were in each room. Nowhere except at a detention cell in a basement were there iron bars, and nowhere a stone wall. The whole looked as though it might be a well-to-do settlement or possibly a nicely ordered and refined country club.

But outside, walking around by himself, was Warden Holohan of

campaign and there were charges

of fraud. Contests were filed. The Election Board decided in favor of the Republicans and they took of contest to the Legislature.

WHILE the contest was pending, mountain men, a thousand or more, swarmed into Frankfort. The call had gone to them to rally at the capital to support the Republicans as against a decision of the Democratic Legis lature that was expected to be ad creeks and coves of the remote mountain counties. Armed?

Of course. Carrying arms

was a prudent practice in the mountains, enjoying every social sanction. Besides, as they under uation at Frankfort, and there was a chance that the Democrats there might not want their Legislature

influenced, in which event a moun

It was Caleb Powers, a moun tain man, who had gone through the mountains proclaiming that now was the time for all good Re

the party. It was one of the things that would be used to the problem.

"I inherited this matter from a

As for the prison directors, Presi

he added, for those convicted of mis

deeds and for narcotic addicts.

But that is not what the clubw

women who campaigned for the insti

going to see if the law can be changed. A few days ago, all expen ditures on the institution were cut off

on order of State Director of Finance Vandegrift.

And there the California Institution for Women stands, bright, new, club

like—glistening in the sunshine. Care takers sprinkle the lawns and water

the flowers. The only other sounds

which break the stillness are the sigh

of the valley winds about the eaves

of the blue, green and yellow-lined cot

million-dollar investment lies idle.

Miss Mosgrove has resigned as super

TOY TALKIES

Walter Quermann

THE AMATEUR DETECTIVE

This is a game that can be played by any child. All that is needed are scissors, paste and some cardboard. The directions for playing "Toy Talkies" are given at the bottom of the game.

THE PLAYERS

BRICKEY—Formerly of the army of occupation; he is trying to find his fiancee.

OFFICER OTTO—Of the local police.

SHERLOCK BONES—A great detective, who is helping Brickey.

THE PLAY BEGINS

(Officer Otto and Brickey enter, talking.)

OFFICER OTTO—Your friend Sherlock Bones is wonderful at finding criminals.

BRICKEY—But the girl you want to find isn't a criminal.

OFFICER OTTO—It is the only way. Where is she to meet you?

BRICKEY—In front of Hans' garden.

OFFICER OTTO—Well, this is the place. Good luck. (He leaves.)

BRICKEY—Thank you. (Sherlock Bones enters, wearing disguise No. 1.)

SHERLOCK BONES—(In falsetto voice.) Oh, how wonderful that you should come back for me. And I hear you are rich, too.

BRICKEY—I'm afraid I don't understand.

SHERLOCK BONES—(As if surprised.) You don't understand? Of course, I've changed after all these years.

BRICKEY—I would know Hilda no matter how much she changed. Begone, imposter.

SHERLOCK BONES—So this is the way you treat me. I shall tell my father and my brothers about this. (He leaves.)

BRICKEY—Whew! How terrible. (Sherlock Bones enters, wearing disguise No. 2.)

SHERLOCK BONES—(In falsetto voice.) Here I am, dear. I knew you would come.

BRICKEY—There must be some mistake.

SHERLOCK BONES—I am Hilda Schmidt. Perhaps I'm not as beautiful as I was.

I've had to work so hard. But that will all be changed now that you are rich.

BRICKEY—You are just another imposter. Go, or I shall call the police.

SHERLOCK BONES—I'll go, but I'll have the law on you. You can't break our engagement so easily. (He leaves.)

BRICKEY—Good gracious, I wish Sherlock

Bones were here. (Sherlock Bones enters without disguise.)

SHERLOCK BONES—Lovely day, isn't it?

BRICKEY—Gosh, I'm glad you came. I ran an ad in the paper for Hilda

Schmidt. Two women have answered, but neither was she. I'm afraid they will make trouble for me.

SHERLOCK BONES—You run along and leave them to me.

BRICKEY—(Leaving.) Thank you.

SHERLOCK BONES—Certain serious

things have developed in this case. Well,

I hope I have taught Brickey a lesson.

Those two Hildas were none other than

Sherlock Bones in disguise. I hope I have taught him that an amateur detective

is a pretty poor substitute for Sherlock

Bones.

CURTAIN

DIRECTIONS: Cut out back-drop and pin it on a wall near the floor. Next, take two books and stand them at each end and about 5 inches in front of back drop. Then take characters, cut them out, and paste them on thin cardboard, folding flap at bottom so they will lean back a little. Attach a piece of thread about 15 inches long. Place the characters back of the book on the right hand side of the stage and draw them on the stage with thread as they are needed. The operator may talk for the characters, changing his or her voice as different characters go on the stage, or each character's part may be spoken by a different child. A flashlight can be used as a spotlight.

TALLULAH BANKHEAD

A different movie star will make his or her appearance in this space every week. Accompanying will be three costumes this particular player wore in various roles played on the screen.

Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes.

Now dress the star in the proper outfit, being careful to assemble each costume correctly.

This week's star is Tallulah Bankhead of the stage and screen. The three sets of costumes shown here were worn by her in these roles in the following movies:

Susan in "Thunder Below," Carlotta Ann Trevor in "My Sin," and Elsa Carlisle in "The Cheat."

Next week: Wallace Beery.

First to Follow Alone Through the Air the Caravels of Columbus

"Heart's Content," tiny moth plane, in which Capt. J. A. Mollison of England made an aerial journey across the Atlantic Ocean from east to west. He flew from Portmarnock, Ireland, to Pennfield Ridge, New Brunswick, to finish, on August 19, a 30-hour solo flight. The air journey from the American continent to Europe in solo flight has been made twice, but never before has one aviator, by himself, successfully covered the same area in the opposite direction. This photograph shows Mollison's plane just after landing in the British province northeast of the State of Maine.

Capt. Mollison photographed on Roosevelt Field, Long Island, where he completed the journey he had planned from the Old World to the New.

GLORIOUS FINISH OF THE OLYMPICS—The Golden Bears of California crossing the line first by 15 inches in the eight-oared shell contest at Long Beach, Cal. The American crew is the one in the foreground. The Italian crew, which finished second, seems to be ahead due to the angle at which the picture was made. Canada and Great Britain were closely bunched for third and fourth places.

"WIDER, PLEASE"—A keeper at the London Zoo takes the opportunity at feeding time to examine the teeth of the hippopotamus and see if they are in good working order.

A FREAK OF THE STORM—The second floor of a home in Freeport, Tex., stood on end but with one of its side walls left intact by a hurricane which swept the southern part of the State.
